Britain May Order Forced Army Service

Action Expected Before Hitler Replies To Roosevelt
LABOR ANXIOUS

Report Russia Joins France in Urging Move For Conscription

London—(P)—The British cabinet, meeting in extraordinary session, was reported tonight to have outlined a new compulsory military service bill while the nation learned of vast indirect tax levies imposed to meet an arms-swollen budget.

It was understood the new compulsory military service bill would provide for:

- 1. Mandatory physical training.
- 2. Enforced elementary military training for men between 19 and 21.

Sharply-increased tobacco and sugar taxes were announced today by Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, introducing the 1939-40 budget in the house of commons.

At least half of the defense costs will be met by loans. Britain will spend nearly 50 percent of an estimated budget of nearly $1,300,000,000 for defense.

Sir John disclosed that $5,000,000 ($25,000,000) had been set aside for expenditure on food reserves in the new budget for the 1939-40 fiscal year which began April 1.

It was believed the government was planning its plans for a new military service system with the intention of announcing them before Chancellor Hitler answers the Roosevelt peace appeal on Friday.

An opportunity for announcement of the government's decision will come tomorrow when a motion calling for conscription will be before the house of lords.

Hitler was to be advised, it was said, that the step was being taken as a matter of self-defense in the present world situation and as a reflection of popular sentiment in the nation.

Soviet Russia was reported by diplomatic sources today to have joined France in urging Britain to employ compulsory military training as her first step in bulwarking an alliance against Rome and Berlin.

May Warn Hitler
Usually well-informed sources said Britain had sent her ambassador, Sir Neville Henderson, back to Berlin with instructions to warn Chancellor Adolf Hitler she would adopt conscription if he rejected President Roosevelt's appeal for peace or failed to give some other active indication of an intention to keep peace in Europe.

It was promised that Sir William Seeds, British ambassador in Moscow, had sent a message to Prime Minister Chamberlain emphasizing the Soviet view. This was just before Henderson was ordered to return to Berlin.

British labor circles were disturbed seriously by the conscription report and argued that Hitler was unlikely to change his Reichstag speech next Friday, answering Roosevelt, because of any warning from Whitehall.

On the other hand foreign officials theorized that only a threat of conscription would make Hitler realize how great a revolution had taken place in British foreign policy.

Senate Backs Bill for New Farm Bureau

Engrosses Assembly Plan To Replace Existing Department
AMENDMENT KILLED

Debate Confined To Proposal To Put Heads Under Civil Service

Madison—(P)—A new state department of agriculture to replace the present department of agriculture and markets seemed assured today with senate engrossment of an assembly reorganization bill.

Debate on the bill, by Assemblyman Rice (R) Delavan, was confined wholly to an amendment by Senator Rissler (R) Madison, and Shearer (R) Kenosha, placing proposed division heads under civil service. The amendment was finally killed, 17 to 13.

The bill would replace the present seven-man part time advisory board with a new body, appointed by the governor and confirmed by the senate. The new board also would have seven part time members. A director, at a salary of $6,000, would be selected by the board with administrative and executive powers. The board and director could set up as many divisions as deemed necessary.

Oppose Amendment
Republican, led by Freehoff of Waukesha, Lovelace of Woodford and Coakley of Beloit, warned the civil service amendment would hamper centralization of responsibility in the department and handicap the director.

Freehoff and Lovelace, members of a joint legislative committee named to investigate the present department, said they discovered a lack of "harmony" among division heads under civil service and without its protection they could be removed by the director "to keep things in tune."

Coakley called the proposed division heads "departmental heads, in a sense" because of the scope of their work. He said ordinary departmental heads are not required to be civil service employees.

Two Progressives, Rissler of Madison, and Nelson of Maple, said the vote on the amendment would stand "where the administration stands on civil service."

Nelson said the absence of any limit on the number of divisions that might be created would make the department "a very fine place to pay off a lot of political debts."

"To safeguard agriculture, in order that we might encourage competent men and women to engage in state service, there should be some assurance that they won't be subjected to the whim of new administrations," Nelson said.

28 Indictments are Voted by Grand Jury
Milwaukee—(P)—The federal grand jury returned today 28 indictments, including one charging the murder of a federal officer and another the violation of the securities exchange act.

The jury reported to Judge Patrick J. Stone of Wausau, who is presiding in court here during the absence of Judge F. A. Geiger, who is ill.

It was reported the murder charge was based on the shooting of Royal Nettleton, a federal forester, in Forest county Nov. 23, 1937.

The indictments included charges of internal revenue law violation, bank embezzlement, postal law violation, forgery, counterfeiting, burglary on an Indian reservation, perjury, bank robbery, conspiracy, and transportation of an automobile in interstate commerce.

Prince Olav of Norway To Get U. of W. Degree
Madison—(P)—University of Wisconsin regents voted today to grant Crown Prince Olav of Norway an honorary degree of doctor of laws when he visits this city and the university June 18—the date of the university's eighty-sixth commencement.

Prince Olav was nominated for the degree by the university faculty in recognition of the services of Norwegian immigrants and their descendants to the state of Wisconsin during the last century. President Clarence A. Dykstra said.

The crown prince and Crown Princess Martha are scheduled to arrive in New York April 27 where they will open Norway's exhibition at the world's fair on May 1, and then begin an extensive tour of the country.

Bolivian President Becomes Dictator
La Paz, Bolivia—(P)—Bolivia received with apparent calm today 35-year-old President German Busch's assumption of dictatorial powers as "the only road toward reorganizing the republic internally and internationally."

A presidential manifesto yesterday condemned leftist and rightist "extremist tendencies" threatening to split the country and said Busch "saw with pain and fascination" tendencies which are not acceptable in this country.

Roosevelt Favors Creation of Three New U. S. Agencies

Assembly Passes Bill for Repeal Of Tenure Statute

New Measure Favored by School Boards Group Will be Offered

Madison—(P)—The assembly took from the table today the James bill repealing the teacher tenure law of 1937 and passed it 48 to 46—a move advocated last week by the Wisconsin Association of School Boards.

The bill was sent to the senate for concurrence.

The tenure law made permanent the positions of all teachers who, at the time of passage, had or later acquired five years of service.

While proponents of this law voted against repeal, they had an agreement with the author, Assemblyman James (R) Montfort, to let the bill go through with the understanding that a new tenure proposal patterned after the plan of the school boards association, would be introduced Thursday. It will be offered Assemblyman Alfonsi (P) Pence, who was instrumental in having the 1937 act passed.

Alfonsi said the new bill would grant tenure to those with five years of service but would allow school boards one year to order dismissals before tenure becomes effective. It also would exclude married women teachers and all those over 65.

The Schenk bill to exempt teachers of one and two room schools is pending in the senate. Alfonsi said he would not include that provision in his proposal.

Assemblyman James declared the biggest objection to the present law was the retroactive feature under which great numbers of teachers acquired tenure automatically. Passage of the repeal bill is the only way to eliminate that objection, he claimed.

Conciliator Tries To End Deadlock
Steelman Silent on Whether He Has Compromise Proposal

New York—(P)—John R. Steelman, United States conciliation service chief, today entered the deadlock negotiations between bituminous coal miners and operators over a basic contract for the soft coal industry.

Appearing as a personal representative of Secretary of Labor Perkins, Steelman gave no indication whether he had a compromise proposal which might end the work stoppage of 350,000 miners in the eight-state Appalachian area and Alabama, now in its fourth week.

The men have been idle since April 1 following expiration of their old two-year contract which negotiators have been trying to replace with a new one. CIO President John L. Lewis, who ordered the stoppage, is seeking either a closed shop or the elimination of strike penalty clauses.

Steelman's task was complicated by A. F. of L.-CIO rivalry and the demands made by A. F. of L. President William Green in Washington last night.

Coming to the defense of the A. F. of L.'s own soft coal union, the smaller Progressive Mine Workers of America, Green wrote Steelman the federation would protect the rights of coal miners to make their own choice of a bargaining agency.

He demanded that the miners be allowed to decide in a Wagner act election "the character and nature" of their collective bargaining agency.

Everything Set; Post-Crescent's Party Is Tonight

Third Annual Gathering Of Fishermen Scheduled at Rio Theater

BY GORDON MCINTYRE
A sports event about which there were inquiries two months before it was announced, an event which can't begin to meet the demand for tickets, and an event which is the outstanding Fishermen's Party in the state, bar none, will be staged at the Rio theater starting at 8:15 this evening.

The event is the third annual Appleton Post-Crescent Fishermen's Party.

Final arrangements were being made for the gathering today so there won't be a single hitch in proceedings. The program has been arranged to move rapidly and to be varied enough to satisfy everyone. It will feature entertainment, movies and just enough speaking to taper it off.

And then there'll be the awarding of more than 170 prizes because, in numerous instances, winners will receive more than one article.

Doors to the Rio theater will open at 7:30 sharp and it will be first come, first served for the more than 1,800 persons who will jam the house. A few minutes before 8:15 pictures of the crowd will be taken and at 8:15 exactly the show will get under way with an announcement and a welcome.

Winifred McDonnell's trio from the Normandie cocktail lounge will furnish the first entertainment by motion picture, a talk by Mark Catlin, Appleton, member of the conservation corps, now independent.

In the new federal agency would be grouped the WPA, except for the youth administration; the public works administration and United States Housing authority, now under interior; the bureau of public roads, now under agriculture; the public buildings branch of the treasury's procurement division, and the branch of building management of the national park service so far as it is concerned with public buildings which it operates for other departments or agencies, now under interior.

The name of the works progress administration would be changed to "in order to make its title more descriptive of its major purpose," the president explained.

Federal Loan Agency
Agencies under the federal loan agency would be the reconstruction finance corporation, the electric home and farm authority, federal home loan bank board, federal housing administration and the export-import bank.

Mr. Roosevelt also proposed transfer of the farm credit administration, the federal farm mortgage corporation and the federal farm credit and associated press agencies to the agriculture department.

The president called the extensive regroupings his reorganization plan No. 1.

Submission of the president's proposal was expected to touch off a new congressional battle over government reorganization, legislative

Thousands Greet Prince, Princess On Racine Visit

Royal Visitor Pays Tribute to Danes for Contributions to State

Racine—(P)—A memorable chapter in the history of Racine was added yesterday with the visit from Crown Prince Frederik and Crown Princess Ingrid of Denmark.

Success of the event could be judged from the remarks of both. The princess declared: "I've never been so thrilled. Just think of it, 20 miles of people waiting just to glimpse us." And the prince told the 3,000 attending the reception in Memorial hall he had been made to feel at home.

Prince Frederik delivered a formal address in English at the reception. He said in part:

"The rich farmland, the dairy cattle and cozy farmhouses recalled in our mind the Danish islands, or perhaps even more, Jutland, with its somewhat more rugged nature."

"Thus thousands of men and women from our country found their way to your great state and I am happy to hear you confirm that they form a well-esteemed element of your people and that they have taken an active part in the upbuilding of this state as good and loyal citizens."

"It is a great pleasure to visit a city that has the reputation of being a great pleasure to visit."

Back Changes in Wage-Hour Bill

House Committee Strongly In Favor of Series Of Amendments

Washington—(P)—The house labor committee overwhelmingly approved a series of amendments to the wage-hour law today to liberalize its application to agricultural labor and grant numerous exemptions.

By a vote of 16 to 2, Chairman Norton (D-N. J.) said, the committee approved an omnibus bill which would, among other changes, exempt so-called "white-collar" workers receiving as much as $200 monthly from both the wage and hour provisions of the act.

With several last-minute revisions, the committee also approved an amendment to the agricultural section which would permit workers engaged in certain specified operations to work 60 hours weekly throughout the year and exempt them from all regulation as to hours for a total of 14 weeks in any year.

Workers engaged in so-called "winter processing" of fresh fruits and vegetables, including washing, grading and packing, prior to further processing, would be granted total exemption.

Before adopting the agricultural amendment, the committee voted down, 14 to 7, a proposal by Representative Barden (D-N. C.) to afford all agricultural labor complete exemption from both the hours and wages provisions of the law.

$2,800 Damage Award In Automobile Crash
Marquette—(P)—A circuit court jury last night awarded J. R. Robinson, Niagara, $2,800 damages against John Krenn, Jr., Iron Mountain, as a result of an automobile collision on U. S. Highway 141 near Niagara last Oct. 1. The jury found that both drivers failed to maintain a proper lookout and fixed Krenn's negligence at 80 percent. This verdict gave Robinson 80 percent of total damages which the jury fixed at $3,500.

Sentenced to Prison For Fatal Shooting
Shell Lake, Wis.—(P)—Roy Swope, 33, pleaded guilty in circuit court today to a charge of second degree manslaughter and was sentenced to state prison for four to seven years.

The charge was based on the shooting of Swope's wife last fall. Swope, recently returned from the Central State hospital where he was under observation for six months, entered his plea before Circuit Judge William R. Foley after the state had reduced the charge from murder to manslaughter.

Roosevelt Appoints Ohio Man To National Labor Relations Board as Successor to Smith

Washington—(P)—President Roosevelt today nominated William M. Leiserson of Ohio to be a member of the national labor relations board to succeed Donald Wakefield Smith of Pennsylvania.

The latter's term expired several months ago. He was given a recess appointment last fall, but the president never submitted his nomination to the senate when congress convened.

The American Federation of Labor had opposed Smith, contending he was prejudiced in favor of the CIO.

Leiserson, now a member of the national mediation board, was nominated for a term of five years dating from Aug. 27, 1938.

Reports that he was in line for the L. L. R. B. post were heard in labor circles after Leiserson conferred yesterday with President Roosevelt.

Chairman J. Warren Madden of the labor board said Leiserson was an "excellent man" who "knows his way around in the field."

Senator Munton (D-Ind.) of the labor committee expressed the opinion the choice would be "satisfactory to everybody."

Since 1934, Leiserson has been a member of the mediation board created by congress to administer the railway labor act. As such, he has to deal with many problems similar to those faced by N. L. R. B., such as designation of representatives for collective bargaining, the investigation of labor disputes affecting railroad unions, and the holding of elections among employees.

The 56-year-old economist who was born in Estonia, and came to the United States in 1900, attended the University of Wisconsin and Columbia university.

Eugenics Measure Lost in Assembly

House Refuses to Order Bill to Third Reading By 48 to 46 Vote

Madison—(P)—The bill sponsored by the Wisconsin Race Conservation committee for a more effective state sterilization law was defeated by the assembly today on a close vote.

After failing on a 46-46 tie to a motion for indefinite postponement by Assemblyman Tehan (D) Milwaukee, the house refused, 48 to 46 to order the bill up for third reading. It can be revived only on a motion for reconsideration.

The measure proposed to set up a state eugenics commission of five members with discretionary power to order the sterilization of mentally defective persons confined in state institutions.

It also sanctioned sterilization of normal persons requesting it and provided that in the institutions, religious objections could prevent operations by assuming responsibility for persons involved.

The law now in force allows the board of control to have operations performed on inmates of the institutions only with their consent. It has not been widely used.

Chief conflict on the proposed measure centered on the question whether sterilization is an effective means of improving the race.

Assemblyman Tehan maintained authorities on the subject do not agree and that it is not within the province of laymen legislators to "endorse something about which too little is known."

Assemblyman Fitzsimons (D) Fond du Lac, and Schmitt (R) Germantown, voiced similar objections.

Assemblyman Catlin (R) Appleton, supported the bill on the contention that current methods of regenerating feeble-minded persons have made no progress in keeping down the population of the mentally deficient. He said the measure provided ample protection to those who oppose sterilization on religious grounds.

Senate Votes Increased Marriage License Fee
Madison—(P)—The senate completed legislative action today on a bill, which with Governor Heil's signature, will increase the marriage license fee from 50 cents to $1.

The senate concurred in an assembly passage and returned it to the house for message to the governor.

The senate concurred in a bill conferring civil and criminal jurisdiction upon the Lincoln county court and passed unanimously a bill excluding high school, college and university students with part time jobs from benefits of the unemployment compensation act.

A bill authorizing refund of taxes on motor fuel used in agricultural trucks was passed by the senate 25 to 5.

The senate engrossed a bill allowing judicial review of industrial commission rulings in the county where the applicant resides or where the action arises. Such appeals now must be filed in Dane county circuit court.

Secrets of Kitchen Will be Revealed in Post-Crescent's Annual 4-Day Cooking School

Cookery secrets which one hostess shares with another as jealously as though they were the family jewels will be divulged freely and distributed impartially to the women who attend the Post-Crescent's annual cooking school next Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday mornings at the Rio theater.

Prize recipes and secret formulas for sauces and dressings which ordinarily "even your best friend won't tell you" will become public property then, for the cooking school audiences of previous years have learned that the classes are conducted on a give and take basis, and the women come prepared to exchange ideas and recipes, leaving something of their wisdom and experience and taking home with them some new work-savers to make homemaking easier.

Everyone likes to be behind the scenes at any event, to know what makes the wheels go around. The women who attend the cooking school will have that opportunity, for they will be able to observe how Mrs. Mary Ann Kidd, the home economist, creates and flavors with the shortening and sugar, and with seasons, fries and molds attractive dishes. Part of the interest centers around the opportunity for a close-up study of the newest developments in kitchen and laundry equipment and the inspection of utensils and accessories by this capable adviser to simplify her own work. Miss Kidd will welcome questions on labor-saving equipment and interesting food products.

Reorganization Plan Proposes to Create Six Major U. S. Jobs

Washington—(P)—President Roosevelt's reorganization plan No. 1, submitted to congress today, proposes creation of six new top federal jobs with salaries aggregating $63,000.

The federal loan, works, and security administrators each would receive $12,000 annually and each would be empowered to have a $20,000 assistant.

There were no indications at the White House as to who might be appointed to these positions, but in some government circles there was speculation that Jesse H. Jones, RFC chairman, might become chief of the loan agency, and Arthur J. Altmeyer, social security board chairman, head of the security agency.

Continuation of some present federal jobs is specifically provided for. These include a commission of public buildings at $2,000, and commissioners of public works and works projects, each to receive $10,000 a year.

Schafer Hits at Alleged Libels by Federal Officials

Says They Expect Government to Defend Them After Making Statements

Washington — (U) — Representative Schafer (R-Wis.) attacked what he said was a policy under which officials apparently could issue libelous statements and expect the government to defend them.

During a house Indian subcommittee hearing on a bill extending the time and broadening the scope on which the attorney general of California could sue the federal government on treaty claims of Indians in that state, Schafer commented on a reference to a $200,000 libel suit of Frederick G. Collett, attorney for the California Indians, John Collier for statements appearing in an Indian office publication.

"Houston Thompson (special assistant to the attorney general) represented Mr. Collier as a private attorney in that case when he was already drawing $833 a month from the government," Schafer declared.

Raps Press Agents

"If every peanut office holder and politician is going to print libelous matter and expect the government to pay for it, and ask for a battery of attorneys and $100,000 to defend the case, we'd better decide our attitude on it," Schafer said.

"There are now more newspaper men on the government's pay rolls as press agents and publicists than there are in the Washington bureau of the Associated Press, the United Press and the International News Service."

Schafer clashed frequently with Wallace Howland, Indian office representative, regarding Collett's activities as representative of the Indians of California, Inc.

Howland charged Collett had encouraged Indians to borrow money in order to retain him and his associates as attorneys. He said personal investigation convinced him Collett did not represent anything like 17,000 California Indians which he claims as members of the organization.

"I know that for generations Danish church life, Danish spirit and Danish customs have had their home here.

"You, the Danes, cherished this old heritage of your daily life with your fellow American citizens, and the warm-hearted welcome and participation of the contributions of the Dane to the growth and development of your state and city have been most gratifying to me."

Governor Julius P. Heil joined with Mayor T. Gleason Morris in removing some of the formality from the occasion.

Morris was brief. "People love me more," he asserted, "when I talk less."

Governor's Comment

Launching his address the governor began: "Your excellency prince—princess—." He said it was one of the proudest moments of his life. Then he cast aside his prepared address, pointed to Prince Frederik, and said:

"Isn't he nice? Look at him!"

Roars of laughter and applause followed. The royal couple appeared to enjoy it equally.

Heil urged: "Oh, girls and boys, give me real applause this time! Isn't she pretty?"

Toasts were drunk to the president of the United States and the King of Denmark.

During the repast, Princess Ingrid spent most of her time talking with the governor, while Prince Frederik conversed with Mrs. Stephen Bolles, recent bride of the Janesville editor and congressman who was in the reception party.

The city and route followed by the motorcade was bedecked with Danish and American flags.

Schools were dismissed that children might see the royal couple.

After their house here, the couple returned to Chicago for a reception.

Lord Lothian, Next British Ambassador to U. S., Changes Views About German Fuehrer

London — (U) — Many-titled Lord Lothian, Britain's ambassador-designate to the United States who in 1933 regarded Adolf Hitler as "earnestly" desirous of peace, has decided that Hitler's book, "Mein Kampf," shows the German Fuehrer's objective is to remake "a large part of the world by force."

Lord Lothian's appointment yesterday to succeed Sir Ronald Lindsay at Washington "some time in the summer" recalled a speech by Lord Lothian in the house of lords on April 13 in which he said he had read for the first time an unexpurgated edition of "Mein Kampf" ("My Struggle") during the Easter holidays.

In that address, the peer said, among other things:

"I believe we can count on being able to obtain from the United States facilities for bringing the enormous industrial resources of that country behind the democracies to help in any way that is possible."

In that speech, he upheld Prime Minister Chamberlain's appeasement policy as "right" insofar as it was an effort "to prove to the rest of the world that we wanted appeasement and not war."

"But today if we want to be sure of support from the dominions and of sympathy and assistance from the United States—and I have visited both recently—it is absolutely essential that we should prove to the world that we are capable of giving effective resistance to aggression."

Lord Lothian returned to England Feb. 15 on the Queen Mary, a fellow passenger with United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy. He had been Kennedy's guest at Palm Beach during the envoy's winter vacation.

Lawmakers Grope For Plan to Pay Old Age Pensions

Want Scheme That Will Satisfy Aged and Won't Wreck Administration

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison—With its budget bill completed and submitted to the legislature proper, the joint finance committee of the senate and assembly today had turned to an equally difficult task, that of writing an old-age pension bill which will be acceptable politically and still be within the means of the administration.

Many legislators frankly take a gloomy view of the situation. They look at the difference in receipts and the disbursements under the budget and strongly doubt whether the financial wizards of the administration forces can devise a pension bill which will quiet the old-age pension lobby without raising such heavy new taxes that political retaliation will not result at the next election.

It is apparent that the Republican majority would like to enact a maximum pension of $35 to $40. But that would require just about as much money as is necessary under the present schedule. Now the pension payments per month hover around $21.

No $60 Pensions

Although it could not be predicted today what kind of a pension bill the administration will pull out of its bag, there was a practical unanimity of opinion that the $60 at 60 years will not pass this session of the legislature, if it ever passes.

Such a bill, it has been estimated, would necessitate the raising of at least $20,000,000 of additional revenue a year, or about two thirds as much as the entire state government will cost under the Heil budget.

Governor Heil has said that he feels his administration will produce a maximum $35 pension law. The Republican legislators at their recent caucuses have discussed the problem, but the paucity of comment among them indicated that they have yet reached no decision.

The question meanwhile looms large in the minds of the constituents of the lawmakers, they report. Letters are piling in from the aged all over the state, many of them containing insistent demands that the various bills already introduced be reported out of committee and acted upon immediately.

An assemblyman, John L. Youngs of Oconto county, where relief and public welfare are the biggest problems of local government, has had so many letters from people interested in pensions that he has been forced to mimeograph his replies.

Some two dozen pension bills are now in the legislative hopper. All of them, by action of the separate houses, have been returned to the finance committee for study. The finance committee has been instructed to incorporate the "good features" of the miscellaneous measures into an administration bill which will be submitted to the houses later. How much later could not be ascertained today. It will probably not be until some ingenious lawmaker on the administration side finds a new and painless method of extracting money from the taxpayers to pay for the pension program.

City Government Expense $93,000 During Quarter

Contingent Fund Used to Remodel Lincoln School Under PWA

City government expenses for the first three months of the year totaled $93,841.37, according to a quarterly report compiled by Carl J. Becker, city clerk and comptroller.

Unpaid accounts contracted for during the three month period are $10,000 bringing the actual cost to $106,903.63. Left in the budget for the remaining nine months is a total of $308,973.64. The original budget was $444,704.57.

Only two of the original budget accounts were disturbed during the period. A total of $32,827.30 was transferred from the contingent fund to the PWA city hall account and $2,000 was taken from the PWA fund and placed in the city hall building fund.

All budget funds show normal balances and following is a list showing the total amounts spent from each fund: mayor and aldermen, $2,598; official printing, $581; interest on bank balance, $187; city treasurer, $806.38; city clerk, $1,146; assessor, $1,247; auditing, $360.

Reveal Vitamin Treatment to Curb Pain of Face Neuralgia

BY STEPHEN J. McDONOUGH
Associated Press Science Writer

Washington — A new vitamin treatment to eliminate the pain of severe neuralgia of the face was announced today to the national academy of science.

The vitamin used is "B-one," the active factor in food its lack results in the development of beriberi and other nerve degeneration diseases.

Dr. H. Barkley, Dr. M. Y. Krimm and Dr. C. G. Williams of the California Institute of Technology reported the treatment had relieved the symptoms of a majority of 52 persons, some of whom had suffered from neuralgia for 20 years.

The neuralgia condition is caused by damage to the fifth cranial nerve, which carries the sensation of taste and activates the muscles of the jaw. Frequent sharp and intense pains result.

The California scientists said they had treated their patients with doses of the pure vitamin injected directly into the veins. Between 10 and 30 milligrams were administered six days a week for three months or longer. In 10 cases which failed to respond with this treatment alone, liver extract also was injected into the muscles. This brought about marked improvement.

Dr. Charles G. Abbott, secretary of the Smithsonian institution, told the assembled scientists that he had made new refinements in his method of predicting weather variations several weeks in advance.

GOVERNOR HOST TO DANISH PRINCESS

Governor Julius Heil of Wisconsin (right) welcomed Danish Princess Ingrid (left), of Denmark, at a luncheon attended by the Princess and Crown Prince Frederik, in Racine. The Danish royal couple is making a tour of the United States and drove to Racine, a city with 30,000 persons of Danish birth or descent, from Chicago.

Legislature Needs Direction If It Is Not to Meet All Summer

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison—Unless the Republican majorities in the Wisconsin assembly and senate choose steering committees to expedite administration bills, the legislative session may last until late summer or fall, leaders who have served in previous sessions commented today.

The steering committee, it was pointed out, could separate those measures which are considered desirable by the administration, or those sponsored by the Heil forces personally, from the overflow of independent proposals and get them on the house calendars for early action.

Without such preparations, the volume of legislation which has already cropped up is enough to keep the lawmakers at their desks for six more months, experienced legislative attaches declared.

Week Delay

That such a contingency would be welcomed by the Progressive rivals of the administration has already been made apparent.

Progressives are proposing multitudes of amendments to all major bills, and are resorting to every parliamentary move at their command to stall action on bills. The result, unless the administration forces bolster their offensive, will be a long session.

Politicians believe that the voters dislike long sessions. Progressives were criticized in the 1938 campaign for the indifferent pace set by the regular 1937 session, although they were also denounced for the rapid-fire methods of the special session a few weeks later.

Fear "Gag" Charge

Republicans who talk about the desirability of a steering committee, however, are worried lest they are accused of the "gag-rules" tactics of which the Progressives were accused during the 1937 legislature.

However, it was pointed out by others that if all bills are allowed to take their natural course for hearings and positions on house calendars, some of the Heil reorganization measures may be delayed for months.

Another difficulty pointed out for a steering plan is that the Republican leaders aren't always sure what Heil is for and what he opposes. The governor has taken the position that the legislature will work as independently of the executive as it is possible for it to work.

Assemblyman Frank Graess, racing member of the house majority, recently suggested that each party—Republican, Democratic and Progressive—select 240 of its most important bills and slate them for precedence over all others to the end that the session might be shortened. No action has yet been taken on his suggestion.

Warm Weather Steps Up Farm Planting Work

Activity Has Been Delayed by Cold and Abundance of Rain

Chicago — (U) — Taking advantage of rising temperatures and abating rainfall, farmers throughout the grain belt today hastened soil preparation and planting—work have been delayed by cold, wet weather.

Crop experts received reports of rotting oats and serious delays in seeding in important producing regions where the crop should have been in the ground by mid-April. Many fields have failed to sprout and may have to be reseeded or planted to other grains.

Farmers in the northwest hoped to complete spring wheat planting this week or next but operations were 10 days to two weeks later than a year ago. Throughout the country plows were furrowing the earth preparatory to seeding of corn but there were many localities where wet soil or standing water kept farmers off the fields.

Their best cash return on livestock, which is bringing high prices in comparison with the value of grains used for feed. Most grains were priced lower than a year ago. Popularity of livestock producing, however, created a demand for corn not tied up under government loans.

Market Prices

Here are the approximate market prices by which farmers gauged operations for the season:

	1939	1938	1937
Wheat	68	82	126
Corn	48	59	127
Oats	31	29	49
Rye	41	61	103
Soy Beans	52	92	170
Hogs	7.00	8.50	10.00
Cattle	12.00	9.50	14.25

While April rains and snows held up field-work in some sections, they gave the nation its best general moisture picture in several years, replenishing sub-soil reserves over wide areas, crop experts said.

According to the most recent comprehensive survey of conditions by Cargill Inc., surface moisture is good in every state east of the Mississippi river and in virtually all of Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri and Arkansas.

The sub-moisture situation east of the Mississippi likewise was uniformly good and in the winter wheat belt ranged from fair to good, with spots poor. Some parts of the Ohio valley have had too much rain.

French Regime Acts to Tighten Control of Press

Adopts Sweeping Anti-Racial and Foreign Propaganda Laws

Paris — (U) — The French government used its dictatorial decree powers today to tighten control of the press by sweeping anti-racial and foreign propaganda laws.

The decrees, signed by President Albert Lebrun last Friday but kept secret until their publication in the official journal today, were frankly declared to be designed to rally the French press liberties law more than a half century old.

The government's action was believed directed principally at curbing a growing number of pamphlets bitterly attacking Jews and an increasing number of political journals accused of being subsidized from abroad.

Members of the government in the past have expressed fear that money from Germany and Italy was being distributed judiciously to some sections of the French press either as outright bribes or disguised as advertising.

Charges in Press

Leftist newspapers have accused rightist sheets of being financed by German and Italian sources. The rightists have been quick to retort that the leftist press is being subsidized by soviet Russia.

While the decrees as now worded give the government power only to prosecute offenders in courts after publication, the anti-propaganda law contains a clause which some sources said the government might hold as a club over newspapers.

The decree says a future measure will regulate conditions for enforcing a declaration of all funds received for publicity of any sort.

It was pointed out that this might be amplified to give the government power to investigate the financial records of any newspaper.

The decree did not define what was to be considered foreign propaganda. It declared, however, that "it can not be permitted for foreign agents in all liberty to retain in France itself the means of influencing opinion by campaigns appropriate to their ends."

While vigilant at home, France warily followed Britain's lead in sending her ambassador back to Berlin prior to Reichsfuehrer Hitler's answer last Friday to President Roosevelt's appeal for non-aggression guarantees.

German Leaves Claims Tribunal

Action Seen as Indicating Reich Doesn't Expect To Win Cases

Washington — (U) — Dr. Victor Hucking, German member of the mixed claims commission, has quit the tribunal in the midst of its deliberations over World War sabotage claims, it was learned today, and has been recalled permanently to Berlin.

An authoritative source said his departure "undoubtedly meant that Germany had scant hope of winning the cases." This source saw in the recall a possible German move to prevent any decision in the near future.

The claims total $50,000,000 and were made by Americans against Germany as a result of the destruction of a railroad terminal at Black Tom, N. J., and an arsenal at Kingsland, N. J., before the United States entered the world war.

Hucking's departure from the United States came shortly after the commission in January heard final arguments on an American motion to reverse a decision made in Hamburg in 1930, which exonerated Germany for the losses.

It was said authoritatively in American quarters that the absence

Republican Dinners Designed To Give Possible Candidates Chance to Show Their Wares

Washington — (U) — Republicans, hopeful that last fall's election returns were a harbinger of better fortunes to come, are beginning to weigh the chances of potential candidates for the presidential nomination.

Series of Dinners

A series of dinners here that started out simply to help Republican members of congress get acquainted with one another is beginning to play a part in the business of studying the field.

One after another, governors and Senators who won strategic victories for the Republicans in the last election are being brought to Washington to be viewed by prominent party members.

Quite a few are being given a chance to speak, so that their fellows can see them in action and weigh their possibilities. The onlookers are members of congress from all sections, capable of spreading the good word if they see a man they like.

The idea for the dinners apparently grew out of a party given last year by John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican national committee. Many Republican congressmen were invited. Some had never met before. Later, they decided it might be well for the Republicans in Washington to know each other.

They decided to hold some subscription dinners, and Representative Martin of Massachusetts, the Republican floor leader, fitted them into his plan for tightening the party's house organization and building up morale.

Many will be heard. Newcomers to the house were given active jobs in working out the plans for these meetings. Then the members of congress, listening as they do to speeches all day, decided they should have speakers for these night social affairs. And scattered over the country were Republicans who had won governorships and senate seats last year.

Before the congressional sessions is over, many of these men will have been heard. Republicans are pointing out, however, that the presidential candidate will not necessarily come from among last year's victors.

In addition to a candidate, the Republicans—as well as the Democrats—have to decide the attitude their 1940 platform will take toward the legislation enacted under the New Deal. They are divided on this problem, just as are the Democrats, but at this distance from the conventions, interest appears to be centering on personalities rather than planks.

tion commission, more entertainment in the form of Professor Ratzin de Garrett, and the serious side of the program, a talk by Ernest Swift, deputy director of the conservation department.

Judge to Draw Numbers

Following Mr. Swift, Judge Fred V. Heinemann will be called to the platform to begin drawing the lucky numbers. The number winning the Evrindure Sportwin outboard motor will be drawn first with that of the Thompson family rowboat second. Both will be placed in sight of the crowd where they will remain until the time for raffles. The boat will be the seventh-fifth prize awarded, the motor the last.

Awarding the prizes promises to be a difficult task but the Post-Crescent believes it has the best method possible.

Some 50 employees of the Post-Crescent have been drafted for duty during the period. Part of the group will be stationed at intervals in the aisles downstairs and in the balcony. Each person will have a definite area to watch and when a member is called on the stage each will scan his section for the tell-tale hand that will designate the lucky holder.

As the location of the number is learned, the name of the man taking care of the section will be called to the stage and runners will take the prize to him. He will pass it to the ticket holder after verifying the stub, and will ask the winner for his name and address.

Obviously the success of the plan depends on the cooperation given by the crowd. Holders of the lucky numbers will have to "sing out" their location if they are to be located with dispatch. There will be special lights in the theater to make it possible for the crowd to read numbers easily.

Names of the prize winners will not be announced at the party for lack of time. They will be listed in the Post-Crescent Wednesday.

Appointments of Judges Should be Free of Politics

Murphy's Address Signifies Hopeful Change of Policy, Lawrence Says

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Washington — Attorney General Murphy's address in New York, emphasizing the need of a judiciary free from politics, becomes an utterance of major importance here because it signifies a hopeful change of policy.

Unfortunately, the attorney general gave a flimsy example of "political involvement" some of the judiciary appointments of the Harding-Coolidge era, but he omitted to make mention of or to acknowledge some of the mistakes made by the present administration as well. Too often in politics, public addresses would be much more effective if, when condemning a practice, there was a frank avowal of self-blame.

Thus, only recently the senate of the United States discussed at length the politics that entered into the controversy over the appointment of a judge in Virginia. Like wise, when one of Huey Long's henchmen was recently appointed a federal judge despite the fact that he had been expelled from the Louisiana Bar association, there was no hint from the department of justice of impropriety; indeed, the appointment was like many others of the sort that can really be termed "political involvement."

There have been other cases in which persons active in politics have been named to the federal bench without regard to the fact that men of greater ability and qualification were available. Most everybody around Capitol Hill recognizes that federal judgeships often are a patronage office and the instrument of political reward to the faithful party workers or their friends. If Attorney General Murphy intends to change all this, and if he had conceded that his reform effort by no means condones some previous appointments of the present administration, the address would truly be a milestone and as such would be a heartening step in the desire of the American people to see appointments to the judiciary completely diverted from politics.

But there are worse things than "political involvement." It is the involvement of the judiciary in class conflict and the selection of judges from among those who have manifested anything but a judicial attitude in their impassioned assertion of economic causes. As between judges chosen outright for political reasons and those chosen for conscious bias of an economic or class variety, it may well be argued that the judge who has had experience in politics is likely to prove the better judge, because he has lived among the actualities of human life.

It is also not in accord with the record to assume that any particular administration is guilty of bad appointments and that another administration is to be credited with all the good appointments. Experience shows that presidents have been imposed upon or misled by those who recommend men for the judiciary and that often the appointee doesn't square at all with the expectations.

Thus, it was President Theodore Roosevelt who appointed Oliver Wendell Holmes to the supreme court in the belief he would decide railroad rate cases in accord with the Roosevelt doctrine, but Justice Holmes didn't do it.

Fast Appointments
It was President Wilson, liberal, who appointed Justice McReynolds, who became one of the conservative justices of the supreme court. It was President Harding, a conservative, who appointed Chief Justice William Howard Taft, author of many liberal decisions. It was President Coolidge, conservative, who appointed Justice Harlan Stone, one of the liberal members of the court. It was President Hoover who appointed the late Justice Cardozo.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen

Washington — There is a long chance that President Roosevelt will return the visit of the British King and Queen next fall.

Many ifs are attached to this possibility and nothing may come of it. No president has ever made such a trip and much as Roosevelt loves to kick over precedents, this is one that can't be broken lightly.

The memory of Woodrow Wilson's unhappy experience still is too fresh in the mind of the country. The wartime president journeyed to Europe under entirely different circumstances, but with world conditions what they are, a presidential junket even for social purposes would be certain to arouse suspicions as to what was behind it.

Certainly the Axis powers would view the trip with deep misgivings and charge ulterior motives. In the end the president's decision would depend on a combination of factors: the state of Europe, public sentiment at home, business trends and political developments.

Whether he goes or not, however, it is significant that Roosevelt has discussed the idea with intimates and manifested the liveliest interest in the venture. It appeals strongly to all his highly developed instincts for drama. Even though it may remain only a dream, it is a glamorous one that he will mull over in many a secret moment.

Overworked Secretary
The president of the United States is a powerful person, but he is no different than any other boss when it comes to trouble with a temperamental clerical staff.

The other morning as Steve Early, overworked White House secretary, was holding his daily conference with newsmen, his phone rang sharply and Steve shouted to his secretary in an outer office, "Take care of that." A moment later she liberal of liberals, and it was President Roosevelt who appointed Justice Black, though it is doubtful whether this appointment would ever have been made if all the facts about the Ku Klux Klan membership had been known in advance at the White House.

To argue that any administration is better than another in the quality of judicial appointments is rather difficult, because there have been, even under the present liberal regime, some appointments to the lower federal courts which have come in for some sharp criticism as to the influences of local politics.

Maybe Attorney General Murphy intends to serve warning that he will not recommend anybody for the federal bench with a political background unless the legal experience of the nominee is outstanding, and maybe he intends to make a fight against the pressure from Capitol Hill which so often is applied at the White House when a judgeship vacancy occurs. But, anyway, what Mr. Murphy says will be written down now and referred to later on when judgeships are filled to determine whether political and economic bias or class pressure has really been eliminated from the informal process whereby judicial appointments are made. (Copyright, 1939) sult, Roosevelt phoned Louis E. Kirstein, who as an official of Filene's of Boston is the boss of son John Roosevelt, also chairman of the federation's board, that he would accept. That was about 3 p. m. on April 14, and by 4:30, when the word got around, Sears Roebuck's General Robert Wood, who is advisor to Harry Hopkins, and Senator O'Mahoney also accepted invitations.

GOP House Leader Joe Martin also will speak, on "Problems That Persist." It will be one of his rare outside speeches. Hopkins will speak if his health permits.

The American Retail Federation is made up of 200,000 retailers, and this will be its first convention. Theme of the meeting will be the relationship of the retailer to national policy. In his speech, Roosevelt expects to reveal his current attitude toward business.

Note—The federation was formed because some retailers felt they weren't being adequately represented by the economic theories preached by the chamber of commerce. It is a comparatively new organization, founded in April, 1935.

Mysterious Corcoran
In arranging for Roosevelt's speech before the American Retail Federation, Tom Corcoran phoned one of its officials and told him to come over and discuss the plans in advance. Tommy went into a long explanation of how to locate him at the RFC Building.

"I'll be in room number 1017," he said, "the name of Mr. Talley, Assistant to Director's Special Assistant, will be on the door. Bang your fist on the door several times and wait a minute until I say, 'Go to hell.' Then knock louder three more times and I'll let you in."

This system was carried out and it worked.

Telephone Diplomacy
One stock which should not suffer from the war scare is A. T. and T. For the telephone company is profiting from modern streamlined diplomacy. Roosevelt confers with his European ambassadors two and three times a day, while the State department telephones constantly to Europe and South America.

Mexican Ambassador Castillo Najera called Mexico City several times a day during the recent oil controversy discussions. The rate, $13.50 for three minutes.

When Brazilian Foreign Minister Aranha was here last month, he conferred with State department officials in the morning, then called President Vargas in Rio to report at length. The rate, $21 for three minutes. Argentine Ambassador Espil phones his foreign office in Buenos Aires frequently, at the same rate.

Diplomatic and government officials pay the same rate as any subscriber, less the federal tax. (Copyright, 1939)

MARS TROTS AROUND A GOOSE-BERRY BUSH

One of the most surprising results of the President's message to Hitler and Mussolini is the claimed poll of the smaller states wherein inquiry is made whether they have requested America to protect them and whether they feel in any danger of aggression from the Rome-Berlin axis.

We presume that if this claimed inquiry brings many responses to the effect that Germany's neighbors not only did not ask America for protection but felt in no need of it, it may make a clinching argument among certain people of uncertain mentality.

But, if this procedure of Herr Hitler is correctly reported, it partakes of the juvenile to such an extent as to indicate that his approaching address is for home consumption in an atmosphere where no response may be made and no other arguments submitted.

Certainly every nation in Europe within striking distance of Germany is apprehensive lest the German dictator conclude a likely advantage would accrue by treading upon the other's soil. And just as certainly no nation in Europe feels any apprehension from France or Britain.

The democracies have plenty. The autocracies are hungry. Those who have plenty are relatively happy. Those who are hungry are comparatively miserable.

Any statement from Herr Hitler's neighbors that they haven't the slightest apprehension concerning the direction in which Germany's war machine may march will be made with the fingers crossed and tongue in cheek.

We think it has been evident since last summer when the German army was called out for maneuvers that the Rome-Berlin axis had a pretty little plan of obtaining all possible advantage without coming into conflict with any power sufficiently strong to provide real resistance. Britain and France, sensing accurately this purpose, have been willing to see others sacrificed so long as Germany did not acquire too much, become too great, have opened up to her too many trade channels, or acquire self-sufficiency too completely.

However, when Germany might be considered in treading upon Rumania, as an example, what business is that of England or France? Do they love Rumania so passionately they must sound the tocsins around the world to gather all opposition, even including America, over whether Rumania stole part of the land she owns from Hungary or Hungary wants to steal it from Rumania, or whether it really belongs to Poland or should go to Yugoslavia with perhaps a piece of Bulgaria?

The fight, of course, and as of yore, is almost wholly for business. But it would be ridiculous for anyone to go to war over business. We must go to war over liberty or acquire some other word just as graceful and heart-throbbing.

Obviously if a great proportion of the population were not at times easily misled by clever liars or those with clever designs the world would have become a much safer, better, kinder place in which to live than it is.

A PROSECUTOR WHO HATES PROSECUTION

Secretary Perkins has ordered "prompt" resumption of the deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges, the alleged Red CIO leader on the west coast.

Mr. Bridges is probably less dangerous to the peace and security of America than a good many other Reds but his case has assumed a special importance because the hush-hush was put upon it just when the CIO seemed to be more powerful in our government than any other single institution.

Madame Perkins claimed the deportation proceedings were delayed in the expectation that the supreme court decision in the Strecker case might be decisive in that the issues were the same. Now, however, in her directions to proceed full steam ahead, she indicates the issues were never the same because the principal claim against Bridges was that he individually advocated overthrow of the government by force and violence.

It should be manifest to anyone that Madame Perkins' department should be divested of authority over this and similar cases. In matters of this kind the Secretary of Labor is in fact a prosecutor. And the American system forbids the use of a prosecutor who is so evidently and in such pronounced fashion under the influence of the accused or those opposed to the prosecution as to make the hearing something like a burlesque.

The immediate actors in the show will be the immigration officials directly under the thumb and authority of Madame Perkins.

Unless their domes are as solid as concrete they have drawn quite accurate estimates of the way Madame Perkins wants the proceedings to go. If that promise is correct then excluding Bridges from the country is practically out of the question. Only a blunder in the presentation of evidence that might be dropped down the drain could bring about so unfortunate a result for the administration.

Mr. Lewis does not want to lose his strong right arm on the Pacific. He has already lost Mr. Martin at Detroit. And even the keystone of his sprawling empire, the United Miners, are considered uncertain in their allegiance.

In no sense of the word is Madame Perkins a non-partisan or disinterested officer. She would be highly displeased personally to see Mr. Bridges deported. Such a ruling would reflect upon her and lend substance to many covert charges at the administration. A court ruling that the evidence presented was insufficient would be cheering to the Secretary of Labor. And since the court may pass only upon what is presented to it the problem involved will probably not become very complicated.

When this administration doesn't like a law, such as the deportation of alien Reds, it just doesn't enforce it.

FRENCH JUSTICE POINTS US THE WAY

There is something far more important to learn from Europe than how to get into war.

Our justice is too expensive in America. And there are methods employed in Europe to lighten that expense that we might examine to great advantage.

For instance a man was tried recently at Paris for murder. When the jury convicted him the judges, in addition to passing the criminal sentence, entered a judgment in favor of the heirs of the slain person against the assassin for money damages. In America we have to go through two trials upon the same evidence to get the same result.

In New York about two months ago a magistrate by the name of Rudich was expelled from his official position for corruption by the appellate division of the supreme court. The Rudich case was one of the many smaller offshoots of the investigation pursued by Mr. Dewey. But under the American law it became necessary for the Bar Association of New York to start its ponderous machinery in order to disbar the crooked Rudich from inflicting his poisonous presence upon those who required legal advice. And the same court that expelled him from his judicial position listened to the same evidence again, tiresomely considered the same canned arguments, but, composed of consistent men, arrived at the same decision and divested Rudich of his right to practice law.

Our laws which permit under some circumstances separate trials for men accused of participating in the same conspiracy have generally defeated justice. In most cases they have tired out the prosecution. They have tended to empty the public treasury. And in many cases one jury has found a conspirator guilty while another jury upon the same evidence but perhaps dealing with a more attractive defendant has rendered a verdict of "not guilty." The people in general, disgusted with the entire procedure, have wagged their heads in sorrow that their temples of justice could produce such mishapen bags.

There should always be a proper balance maintained between idealistic justice and practical justice. And the balance is lost sight of entirely when justice costs too much or its delays are protracted.

In Wisconsin we made a pretty fair stride toward speed and economy when the legislature gave the courts authority to bring in every person involved in a controversy so that the rights of all could be fixed by one trial. This statute has saved endless expense and delay in auto accident cases where, otherwise, several, perhaps even five or six trials upon practically the same evidence would have been necessary. But it is plain that this is only a starter and great public as well as private advantage would accrue were we to extend the rule in a good many other directions.

Railway detectives in India are trying to stop the practice of traveling on trains with a used return half of a ticket, which they say is becoming a common crime and hard to detect.

A soundproof cabin for two patients, an improved lighting system and a low landing speed are features of a new ambulance plane which recently passed tests near Moscow, Russia.

England may start an own-a-goat campaign following publication of figures showing that while other countries have 67,000,000 such animals England and Wales possess only 60,000.

Seventeen hundred Swedish gold pieces, with a total value of more than $5,000 were found in two stockings in the attic of Miss Anna Svensson, who died in Malaren, Sweden, at the age of 80.

DALE HARRISON'S In Old New York

New York—Stephen Foster's last song—the half-done "Dear Friends and Gentle Hearts" which they found in the composer's wallet when he died in New York many years ago—has been completed. It will be introduced to Broadway and the world May 22 at the premiere of an opera, "Susanna, Don't You Cry," which incorporates about 35 Foster melodies in its score.

The music of the opera is by Dr. Clarence Loomis of Valparaiso, Ind., who learned to love Stephen Foster folk songs when he heard them from the lips of his mother as a boy in North Dakota. The libretto is by Sarah Newmeyer. Unlike "Blossom Time," the operetta which used Schubert music and had Schubert as its chief character, the Loomis opera will not concern itself with Foster's life. The folk composer is a character in the opera, but an incidental one.

The greatest collection of Fosteriana is that gathered together by J. K. Lilly, wealthy Indianapolis manufacturer, which Dr. Loomis consulted studiously before writing the "Susanna" opera. Foster wrote a total of 214 tunes, all of which Dr. Loomis examined before selecting the 35 used in the new opera.

"The music of Stephen Foster has two folk sources," the composer said. "His family was of Irish origin, and when he lived in Pennsylvania he composed melodies of decidedly Gaelic nature. Later he moved to Cincinnati and listened to the Negro songs on the river boats. From that time on, his music was deeply affected by Negro folk tunes."

The "Susanna" opera is to have a pretentious production under the auspices of the American Lyric Theatre, a new producing unit. The sets and costumes are by Robert Edmond Jones. Bettina Hall and Michael Bartlett will sing the leads. By this opera the producing unit starts a program aiming to bring to the attention of American audiences the works of American composers and librettists in the hope of creating eventually an indigenous lyric drama.

Talking the other day about out-of-town girls who want to come to New York and make their way on the stage, the pretty Dorothy Jeffers came to mind. She is one of the few girls who have whipped the handicaps which face youngsters ambitious for stage careers.

Dorothy got to town via a hopscoth tournament which she won in her home town of Scranton, Pa. In appreciation of her hopscothing, her expenses were paid to New York to give her a chance to vie for the hopscoth title of America. Arriving in New York she was dismayed to learn that New York had no hopscoth champion.

Unwilling to return to Scranton with such a story, Dorothy scurried around and was lucky to land a place in one of New York's dancing units. Talent scouts for the Paradise saw her, and she landed there. Engagements followed at the Hollywood, Coconut Grove, Leon and Eddie's and the Adelphi Roof in Philadelphia—experience which started her on a solo career as a tap dancer. At present she is at Bertolotti's in the Village, but come summer she is apt to be performing in a swimming act, because besides being Scranton's hopscoth champion she used to be that city's swim champ as well.

MY YESTERDAY

To a Broadway catch-penny to invest in a bag of buttered popcorn, then along the crowded street munching it, nor caring a whit that Elegant People stared and lifted their eyebrows, as though I were a yokel, which I am.

Still a-chawing, gazed at workmen on Sixth Avenue, the Knights of Toil building a new subway under the very street. Popcorn gone at last, I felt suddenly too full, as served me right, so wandered to Central Park now greening and so pretty.

To dinner with friends from Columbus, Ga., and afterward to home where lately my cocker spaniel has been sulking because I, fluttering around like a bally fool among the city's lights, have been too little home to suit him.

To bed, wondering why women ever buy pink sheets and why, if they must have such colorful items, they have to use them on my couch, lover of the simpler and plainer whites that I am.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

THE SERENADERS

I hear them when the sun commences
To climb through Heaven's drowsy lanes.
They scatter Summer's last defenses.
Where silence was, now music reigns.

My midnight thoughts were dark with sorrow,
They disappear with morning's light.
I might have known a fair tomorrow
Would put my fearful dreams to flight.

For when the birds can serenade me
With songs of courage in the dawn,
I shed the trouble that dismayed me.
And like them, bravely carry on.

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER
Washington—A notable feature of the President's message to Hitler and Mussolini was his offer of a reward for good behavior on their part in place of a military threat for any bad behavior.

The reason he made such an offer is that he simply had no power to make a threat. He could not threaten on to side with France and England in event they agreed to peaceable gestures. Before he can commit the country that far he has to ask Congress to back him up. And whether he could get support for such a position is a matter of considerable debate just now.

The job of being an intermediary between angry nations is thankless and risky, as this country has found out from time to time. But certain senators who have heard the President discuss his position report that he finds this country faced with something of a dilemma.

U. S. On Spot?
If war comes just now and the United States definitely refuses to have a part and even embargoes essential supplies to belligerents, it may bring defeat to France and England. The chances of both sides in Europe have been discussed pro and con for many months in many places, including the White House. Much expert opinion gives England and France no better than a 50-50 chance of victory.

Thus the dilemma. England, if defeated, might well have to surrender her navy. So would France. The totalitarian powers then could assemble an almost invincible armada to move to South America if they sought to make that rich spot their next conquest.

The United States navy, even enhanced by present construction, would have a right smart, time beating them off, particularly if Japan provided a Pacific menace.

That is one side of the dilemma as it is pictured by those who have discussed the situation with President Roosevelt.

The other side is an offer to act as intermediary. The President has already taken that step. It involved the risk of a rebuff. That would not hurt U. S. prestige, it might strengthen public sentiment against the two totalitarian states.

Clarification Might Help
But what some hoped for was a clarification of the requests of Italy and Germany. If they should officially state their demands it would at least clear the air.

Then England and France would be confronted with a positive choice. Would they be willing to make those concessions for peace; or would they be willing to risk war?

Certain of those discussing the case recognized that England and France might make a counter-proposition to us. They might say: If we make these concessions will America pledge her aid to see that Germany and Italy then keep the peace? That's the tough nut. It is a lead pipe cinch that this country's policy would not be changed over night to permit such a pledge.

The only alternative then, is an offer of economic rewards. Just what they may be the President did not indicate. But close readers saw some evidence of background for it in his speech of the day before to the Pan American Union.

There he made it plain that the United States would fight totalitarian economic penetration of the Latin American countries if necessary.

If the two nations made it plain that they wanted economic relief and not conquest, could not the President go into a peace conference with a share in the market of the Americas as his stake in the game? It might mean some sacrifices by the U. S., at least for a time, but cheaper than a war even if we could stay out.

MY GOODNESS
The size of the budget in itself wouldn't perturb many legislators; high budgets have been enacted before. That it should come this year, however, makes them feel singularly aggrieved, although they confess they have done all they can do about it.

Against that $75,000,000 total, the legislature is able to put its collective hands on only $45,000,000 in state revenues for the next two years.

Result: Even if the lawmakers decide to recoup the expiring state taxes—the pension surtax, the dividend tax, and the chain store tax, which will raise about $7,000,000—there will be a deficit, a yawning gap between receipts and outgo, of $23,000,000.

That means new taxes.
How unpleasant that prospect is for the members of the G. O. P. faith in senate and assembly can be understood when it is recalled that the keynote of the Republican campaign was that taxes are too high.

The only single tax source which can supply that amount of funds is a sales tax on a 3 per cent basis with minimum exemptions.

Income taxes might nearly bridge the gap if present normal personal rates were to be doubled, but under the present arrangements, municipalities and counties take half of the revenues from that source.

A substantial increase in income tax rates, coupled with heavy levies on such "luxury" commodities as liquor, cosmetics, tobacco, cigarettes, might approach a solution to the problem. But the only guarantee solution, assuming that the budget as proposed plus relief expenditures are approved, will be a sales tax.

I says, "Grandpaw, have you changed your politics?" And he says, "No, Mr. Robin, I'll never do that. I still think that other party is wrong but I decided you can't beat 'em. And when you can't beat 'em, you might as well join 'em."

HIS HAT-BOX IS IN THE RING

Under the CAPITOL DOME

BY JOHN WYNGAARD
Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison — Speech-weary state legislators will return to their desks in the marble chambers of the capitol this week.

Desks stacked high with more than 1200 separate bills and resolutions—to begin a job which may lead them to wonder whether the men they defeated last November may not be the lucky ones after all.

It is budget time under the capitol dome.

It is a time for hair-scratching and frowning, for the budget this year is a problem the like of which has been experienced by no other legislature for many years.

Here are the brief, troublesome facts faced by the legislators and the administration:

The first draft of the budget bill as it emerges from the finance committee in printed form this week totals $68,500,000.

Administration legislative spokesmen are already conceding that some adjustments will be necessary as "adjustments" upward.

Because of the high-powered lobby maintained by cities and counties, and the necessity for state support of direct relief and other forms of public welfare in some impoverished communities, a $5,000,000 relief bill is likely. Result: the budget will soar to $73,500,000.

MY GOODNESS
The size of the budget in itself wouldn't perturb many legislators; high budgets have been enacted before. That it should come this year, however, makes them feel singularly aggrieved, although they confess they have done all they can do about it.

But the only guarantee solution, assuming that the budget as proposed plus relief expenditures are approved, will be a sales tax.

At the same time I suggest that people, young or old, who regularly consume much sugar or starch in these refined forms are likely to suffer various vague disturbances of health and functional efficiency unless they supplement their diet with special rationals of vitamins and minerals, either in foods rich in these elements or in preparations intended for the purpose.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
A Little Tin Doctor?
Our newly organized P. T. A. discussing the proposition of employing a school nurse. There has been some talk of having a doctor examine the children, but some of the members favor having a nurse. (Mrs. M. C. R.)

Answer—A nurse in her proper capacity is a great blessing. When she attempts to play the role of doctor she is a menace to the well-being of every youngster exposed to her monkeyshines.

Asparagus
Is the juice taken from cooked asparagus beneficial to the kidneys? (W. K. A.)

Answer—It is harmless to the kidneys. I know of no reason to suppose it has any remedial value. Eating asparagus may cause the urine to react to Fehling's or Trommer's tests, altho no sugar is present. (Copyright, 1939)

Won't Accept Debts Challenge
Editor Post-Crescent: If Mr. Vogt read my letter carefully he could see I was not jumping at conclusions or trying to answer his letter. I am just trying to bring out some of the things that the honest people would like to know and if my letter helps to keep this country out of a war I think I have done some good. I think Hull's policies are leading us on to a road to war. If one likes his policies he has a right to criticize, and so have I that right. Fair Dealer had a good write-up and so did E. W. Whiting and Ed N. Gettite and I hope we see more write-ups like these, they help people to see two sides of things. It was our Neutrality act in 1914 that started us in to the World war and that gave Wilson the chance to draw us into the war and they are trying to play the same game again to fool the honest people if there should be a war in Europe. What chance has any other country to get our goods and munitions but England and France? With their largest navy in the world they could get it with their gold on cash and carry, but the poor country's would be out of luck to get it so they would use the U-boats again to stop this goods from getting to their enemy and that would bring war again. We got to say "no" to them all if there is going to be war in Europe and tend to our own business and they will all be our friends after the war. And it is the truth that the honest people are looking for and why should they worry who writes it? I have read many books that the writer didn't sign his name, but still they were good books but I suppose to Mr. Vogt they would be Tommyrot.

His challenge is an old joke. What does he think the People's Forum is for? If he has the truth the honest people will give him credit. Mayor Kelly of Chicago refused to recognize the challenge of his opponent and he got there too, and that's the way I feel about his challenge.

3 Boards Approve Protection Plan

Mass Meeting for Action On Fire Proposal Slated for Monday

New London — Town boards of three townships, Lebanon, Maple Creek and Mukwa, informally approved a plan of rural fire protection presented to them at a joint meeting with the New London department at the city fire hall last night.

Townships of Caledonia and Liberty were not represented but a mass meeting for town board members and all other rural residents of the five townships interested in the plan will be held at 7:30 next Monday evening at the fire hall. The plan calls for the purchase of a new 500-gallon specially designed fire truck for rural use, the townships to buy the truck and the city of New London to house, maintain and operate it. A corps of volunteer firemen would be trained in each township to meet and practice regularly with the New London department to assure the most efficient protection.

The New London police and fire commission has approved of the plan and the support of the city administration will be sought by the New London department before the mass meeting next week when final action will be outlined.

Bill Will Enable Hay Fever Victims to Breathe Easier

Madison — (37)—Wisconsin's thousands of hay fever victims may breathe easier as the result of a bill passed by both houses of the legislature classifying ragweed among statutory "noxious weeds."

The ragweed amendment was tagged on to a bill to eradicate marijuana, the hemp weed used for smoking and beverage purposes.

Doctors attached to the allergy service of the Wisconsin General hospital said today that ragweed causes more hay fever in the state than all other things combined and that its eradication would substantially relieve "suffering."

Under the noxious weed statute, counties and towns must see that weeds are destroyed on lands under their control. Patrolmen must destroy them on highways which they patrol. Individual owners are responsible for their own property.

The state hospital here started treating University of Wisconsin students for allergic diseases about six years ago as part of the student health service. Now, it cares for a growing number of student and private patients.

Includes Many Ailments
Allergy, which simply means hypersensitivity, includes ailments commonly known as hay fever, asthma, eczema, migraine, and certain types of colitis.

It may result from numerous plant pollens, foods, substances, or most anything else. These range from house dust to orris root in powders and cat fur to monkey dandruff.

Two regular technicians and a student assistant are in charge of the tests administered at the hospital to determine, if possible, the cause of allergic diseases. More than 200 different materials are used.

While there are a number of tests in vogue, General Hospital doctors favor the scratch test—the skin is slightly scraped and an extract of the suspected allergen is rubbed into the scarified area. If the test is positive, the area will reddens and swell like a large mosquito bite within 20 or 30 minutes.

Once the offensive substance is discovered, the patient begins a series of injections to "desensitize" him by building up his resistance. Thus, right now, hay fever victims allergic to ragweed are given increasingly larger injections of ragweed to prepare them for the season between August 15 and October 1.

Figures indicate that 30 to 50 per

Failed to Bid Strong Hands Very Logically

BY ELY CULBERTSON

I can well remember the time when pinocle was the favorite game of musicians. You could hardly get a card in the musicians' union if you couldn't take a hand at that game. Today, however, the swing seems to be to contract bridge, as attested by this letter from a member of the famous Philadelphia orchestra.

"Dear Mr. Culbertson: On our recent tour to New Orleans with the Philadelphia orchestra the following hand at rubber bridge was bid, played, and made in the club car of our special train:

"North, dealer.
"East-West vulnerable.
"East-West part score 50.

NORTH
10 7 6
A 4 3 2
A Q 10 6
A J 10 7 5

WEST EAST
Q 8 5 A 4 3 2
K 5 4 J 10 7 5
K 8 2 A 9 6 4
9 4 3 A 2

SOUTH
K 9 6
A K 8 6

"The bidding was:

North East South West
Pass Pass 1 spade Pass
2 no trump Pass 3 clubs Pass
4 diamonds Pass 4 no trump Pass
5 hearts Pass 5 no trump Pass
6 clubs Pass 6 no trump Pass
7 clubs Pass Pass

"Considerable discussion and criticism by our opponents and kibitzers followed. In the first place it was said that North should have opened the bidding in spite of the opponents' score of 50. My good friend, Benjamin Cusickoff, who is rated by some as being the "Ely Culbertson of the orchestra" (to which title he doesn't object at all), said that we had no right to arrive at a grand slam since it depended on the diamond finesse. Had the diamond king been in the wrong hand North would have been thrown off the train somewhere between stations, preferably right in the middle of Tobacco road.

"Was the seven club bid proper and what about the rest of the bidding? We use the Blackwood convention for slams.

"You no doubt can readily appreciate that we of the Philadelphia orchestra take quite seriously the four E's (Bach, Beethoven, Brahms, and bridge).

"I'm afraid that North and South didn't bid this hand very logically. The kibitzer who said that North should have opened the bidding was perfectly right. If anything, you stretch a point to bid in this situation. Your friend Guskoff (to whose title I, too, don't object at all) was equally right when he said you shouldn't have been in a grand slam which depended on a finesse. A grand slam should be about 3 to 1 shot. A finesse is just an even chance.

Logical bidding, in my opinion, would have been the following:

North East South West
1 diamond Pass 2 spades Pass
3 clubs Pass 4 no trump Pass
5 no trump Pass 6 clubs Pass
Pass Pass

"North's opening bid should be in diamonds, even though clubs are the longer suit. In that way, the rebid of two clubs can be made with the necessity of "reversing." When North bids the clubs South should make sure the partnership gets to a small slam, with a hint at the grand slam. North might bid seven (and would easily make it) if he had a six card club suit, the heart queen, or the diamond king, in addition to the red aces. If using the Blackwood convention, North would respond five hearts and six clubs to four and five no trump, respectively. Curiously enough, seven spades would have been a laydown without the diamond finesse, and it could hardly be reached by logical bidding.

As long as color takes the leading role this spring, Ann Rutherford has decided to indulge her taste for rainbow hues to her heart's content. For her latest ensemble, the young M-G-M actress chose wood violet crepe for the one-piece simply draped dress, its short swirling skirt nipped in at the waistline with a wide fuchsia belt. An off-the-face poke in the same fuchsia tone is matched by open-toed sandals of suede. But the color note which delights Ann is the chateau note of her gloves and bag.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE HOME

Matie Schneider's Tested Recipes

Vegetable Cookery

Do you have a hard time preparing vegetables new ways in order to make the meals more attractive and less monotonous? Or do you sit by satisfied and say, "The family just ought to have something better than this." Matter how they are fixed.

In spite of the fact that there are no new vegetables, we women can't just give up in despair and serve the same old way. We can create new combinations and present old favorites in tricky disguises now and then. Of course not every day, but just often enough to be interesting.

For example, the humble carrot becomes a rictator of the table when baked in a casserole with cheese. Baked corn and tomatoes is a delightful combination, which I am sure your family will enjoy.

Try Cauliflower au Gratin, it's a satisfying variation.

Baked Carrots and Cheese
8 large carrots 2 tablespoons American cheese flour
2 tablespoons 1 teaspoon salt butter 1 cup milk
Scrape and slice the carrots crosswise. Cook in a little salted water until barely tender. Leave lid off during last part of cooking so that the liquid will evaporate. Arrange alternate layers of the carrots and thinly sliced American cheese in a baking dish, having the bottom and top layers of carrots. Prepare white sauce by melting butter, add flour and cook until it bubbles, then add the hot milk. Boil, stirring constantly, until the mixture thickens. Season and pour over the carrots and cheese. Bake in a slow oven 300 degrees F. for 30 minutes.

Baked Corn and Tomatoes
2 cups whole kernel corn 1 teaspoon sugar
2 cups canned melted butter
1 teaspoon salt 4 cup buttered
Drain corn, add tomatoes, salt, sugar, and melted butter, and blend. Pour into greased baking dish. Cover top with buttered crumbs, and bake in a moderate oven 30 minutes. Serve 6.

Cauliflower au Gratin
1 cauliflower 1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoons 1 cup grated
flour American
1 tablespoons cheese
butter 1 cup buttered
1 1/2 cups milk bread crumbs
Cook cauliflower in boiling salted water 20 minutes or until tender. Drain, and place in greased baking dish. Make a cream sauce with butter, flour, milk and salt, add cheese and stir until melted. Pour over hot cauliflower, cover with crumbs and bake in a moderate oven 350 degrees F. 20 minutes, or until crumbs are browned. Serves 6.

My Neighbor Says—

The oyster-shell scale is a pest which does much damage to several kinds of garden shrubs, and particularly lilacs. The best time to deal with this pest is very early in the Spring. If the plants are sprayed then with a lime-sulphur solution or with one of the various prepared sprays on the market, the scale can be readily destroyed. The insects move about at this season and have soft bodies. They will invariably be killed if a spray comes in contact with them.

Keep a small pair of scissors in the drawer with your knives. They will trim the edges of pie crust much quicker and neater than a knife.

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

You know as well as I do, that if you will keep slim, extra pounds seem to slay on your hips and derriere! Of course, if you stopped to realize how little actual corrective exercise, or dancing you do, it is not surprising that those offending pounds stay where they do. Most of your life is spent sitting isn't it?

Diet, a sane one, helps to reduce your weight, but only concentrated exercising will definitely slim your hips and derriere once you have allowed them to grow heavy. So work down on the floor, you may think, and spank that unlovely line away. Take satisfaction in the fact that while you are smoothing your hips, you are at the same time helping the circulation of your entire body. So you will feel fit as a fiddle by the time the tape measure tells you that enough weight has been taken off this spot.

Wear Loose Clothing
No bumping exercise will do you a bit of good if you wear tight fitting clothes when you go through the movements. Wear a bathing suit, or shorts and shirtwaist. Allow your muscles to be free so they will be stretched and firmed as you bump your buttocks on the floor. Always exercise in a well aired room, and if the weather permits, exercise with the windows wide open.

Spanking Exercise One

Lie partly on your right side on the floor. Support yourself with one bent knee and outstretched arm as illustrated. Raise and lower your body so it spans, spans, spans your right buttock. After a while turn and spank your left buttock. You'll get out of breath quickly at first, but with a little practice you will be able to keep up the spanking for five and ten minutes.

Spanking Exercise Two

First Part

Lie flat on the floor, arms outstretched sideways. Bend knees, and without the support of your feet, so raise and lower your body that you hit the fatty cushions against the floor—not violently but rhythmically. It's a good idea to do this exercise to radio music.

Second Part

After a week of practicing each day learn to swing from left to right as you spank your derriere as directed in the first part of this exercise. Then the buttocks will get it as well as your thighs and in no time at all you will be sleek as a seal.

My "Dowager's Hump" leaflet tells how correct humping shoulders. If you send for it address me care of this paper and be sure to enclose a self-addressed envelope bearing a three-cent stamp.

If you have trouble making boiled frosting, try boiling the sugar and water until it forms a soft ball in the water, instead of till it spins a thread. Most people cook the sugar and water too long.

It is not a good plan to put foods in the refrigerator wrapped in paper, except occasionally a layer of waxed paper. Paper is a poor conductor of heat and so prevents refrigeration. Bulky objects such as meat roasts may be covered with a single layer of waxed paper.

Whether Youth Is to Have House Key Depends Upon His Behavior

BY ANGELO PATRI

"Mother, this Saturday is my day for having the meeting of the sewing club. I don't want to take them to grandmother's. I'd rather have them here in our house. Can I, mother?"

"No, you cannot. If it were safe for you to have the run of the house I would have given you the key long ago, and saved your grandmother the care of you. You know that I will be working all day and that Saturday is my long day. I couldn't have you and a lot of girls here alone. Grandmother said you could have them there. That ought to satisfy you."

"I don't want to go to grandmother's. We can't have any fun." "What is it you want to do that grand won't allow? Don't you see that you are saying that you cannot be trusted? Your grandmother gives you more freedom than their mothers give your friends. And that isn't enough. No. You hold your meeting at grandmother's."

"All the other girls have their homes for meetings. I'm the only one that can't."

"Nobody is sorrier than I am for that, and you know it. Child, don't you see you are not the only one concerned here. How about the ten or twelve little girls? Suppose they met with an accident here, what could I say to their mothers? What could you say?"

"There won't be any accident." "You are childish, this is exactly the reason you cannot have the freedom of the house without an older person in charge."

"If grandmother came here, could I?" "If grandmother came here, could I?" "If grandmother came here, could I?"

"Would you ask grand, with all she has to do, to come here when you could just as well go there? Who would attend to grandfather, and Aunt Emily?"

"They could wait until she got back." "I didn't think you could be as selfish as that. Sick old people, and they can wait for attention until your party is over."

"She needn't stay all the time. She can go back early." "You're impossible. Once for all, you cannot have the key to the house until you are responsible and prove it to me and your grandmother."

That's the only answer to this situation. The possibilities for trouble for the child left alone in a house feels a much more possessive attachment for him. He is everything to her.

The thought of losing first place in his affection, therefore, and playing second fiddle to his young wife, is doubly galling. All parents feel at least a slight degree of jealousy when their dominant role in the life of their child is usurped by the sweetheart. But most of them gratefully surrender to the inevitable.

Gordon's mother simply has a double dose of jealousy. Her juvenile attempts to feign illness as a means of clubbing him into submission, are both pathetic as well as irritating.

Of course, she thinks doctors don't know their medicine, because the heart specialist disagreed with her. She wanted an excuse by which she could play the invalid's role for years and thereby defer the marriage of her son.

Feigning illness as a means of avoiding a painful situation or gaining one's ends, is called malingering. It may be conscious or subconscious. In fact, it has become a common American racket, and fills our courts with tens of thousands of accident victims who believe themselves much more seriously injured than they actually are.

Gordon's mother refused to see another physician. She rationalizes in part by saying that her nurse can take care of her well enough and that it isn't necessary to go to the further expense of calling in a specialist.

You readers can readily see through this ruse. What did I advise Gordon? To get married with in a month, and express hope that his mother could attend the wedding, but indicate that he was marrying, regardless.

If she learns that she loses more good times by remaining ill than by getting over her heart neurosis, she will recover. Give her a couple of weeks so she can "save her face," and get some new medicine to which she can attribute her recovery, thus apparently justifying her quick convalescence. Never leave such a patient "out on a limb," so to speak.

Laraine Day's double purpose frock in navy threatens to become a Hollywood favorite. The one-piece features suspender shoulders and can be worn with different colored blouses, while the blouses can be substituted for tailleur accessories. The M-G-M actress' favorite combination is a pin-dotted navy blouse worn as a gimpie with the navy frock, navy straw cartwheel hat, navy shoes and shiny red patent bag.

Many of us have in our borders or rock gardens a spot which is definitely sandy and gritty with no signs of humus in the soil. Adding fertilizer is a waste since it leaches right away and in most cases every plant we have tried in the spot adds to our disappointment. These spots are generally brought about by disintegrating lime in the soil. The stone slowly breaks off as fine particles mixing with sandy broken particles of another type stone, which usually associates with the limestone. If you own such a spot you are in luck.

This soil condition is the ideal place for any of the Oenothera family. There are two common divisions of this family which are popularly known. The first division covers the sundrops and the second the evening primroses. Both day and night bloomers respectively. All are easy to grow and when once established bloom year after year, starting in June. They produce intermittently until August. For immediate effects start with pot-grown plants but plants can be grown from seeds. Plants grown from seeds now are not likely to bear blooms until next season.

For the man who sees his garden only at night the variety Lamarkiana is especially recommended. It grows easily, in fact, readily, and is likely to overgrow if well tended. Remarkable is the way in which the blooms open. Lamarkiana is a true night bloomer, beautiful by moonlight and electric light. When darkness covers all, this plant opens its blooms, not slowly but in less than ten minutes from bud to bloom. Then the nectar runs out and the insects of the evening flutter around for their treat.

NEVER TOO OLD

Dear Mrs. Post: Does a lady or a gentleman ever grow too old to say, "Yes, ma'am" and "Yes, sir" to elders?

Answer: According to worldly usage "Yes ma'am" is said only to a queen. It is a colloquial expression in the United States and where used, people would say it just as long as there are any ladies present who were very much older than themselves. Everywhere in the polite world, a gentleman says "Yes sir" to other gentlemen who are much older until he himself becomes one of the oldest generation, and then younger men say it to him. Correctly, every man calls his father "sir"—but he does not call his mother "ma'am." The why of this, I don't know.

A Double Wedding Anniversary

Dear Mrs. Post: Would it be improper for friends to celebrate their silver wedding anniversary with us? I mean, would it be wrong if we went together and gave a big party since our anniversaries fall on the same day and our friends are practically the same anyway?

Answer: A double silver wedding anniversary would be very unusual, because the situation is unusual, but you make the idea delightful as well as sensible. In fact, you were to give separate parties on the same evening, your friends would be thoroughly miserable, either running back and forth between parties or having to regret one in order to accept the other. You would of course receive together—taking turns perhaps standing nearest the door, and you would each have a silver decorated wedding cake at opposite ends of the table. It all sounds very appealing.

A Widow's Wedding Ring

Dear Mrs. Post: My father died a few months ago and my mother wondered if a widow ever discards her wedding ring. Mother doesn't want to put her wedding ring away, but she doesn't like to wear a second band and it is very noticeable that several stones are missing. It would be more expensive than we can afford to replace them right now.

Answer: It would give an unfortunate impression should a widow who dearly loved her husband discarded her wedding ring after his death. It seems to me the best thing to do, if the stones are all of the same size, is to have some of the stones so as to fill in as long a space of diamonds as possible, and have the space that will be all holes filled in smooth with metal. The cost of this repair would be very little, and the ring should look very well. She would keep the plain part underneath. But if it should swing around on top, the plain section would look quite all right. I might

Good Taste Today

By Emily Post

I have never known a woman, for instance, who boasted that she didn't like women and that women didn't like her who could be trusted. She is always a predatory creature, without conscience or mercy, and other women are wise to keep their husbands and sons and boy friends under lock and key when she is prowling about.

I don't know how this works out with men, but any man who has no friends is not likely to succeed, because he will always have to play a lone hand and get no boosts up the ladder.

OLD HOME WEEK MURDER

by Phoebe Atwood Taylor

The Characters

Asay Mayo, Cape Cod sleuth.

Mike Slade, vociferous artist.

Yesterday: Slade climbs the Brinley's trellis to throw a note referring to the murder to Madame Meaux (his sister-in-law). Bedlam ensues when Mrs. Brinley gets the note instead.

Chapter 22

An Unmarried Ecstasieon

MADAME MEAUX herself was no more fully dressed than any of the other women, but somehow she seemed dressed for the occasion. She wore no curlers like Eloise, or cap like Sara, nor was her hair mussed like Jane's. A hairdresser might just have finished with her. Her satin negligee was a rather too vivid shade of orange, but it was unwrinkled and shining.

"One thing about my business," she said, "it teaches you to be smart about emergencies. Now if this had been a fire, Sister Brinley would clutch the pillows in her arms and take them carefully downstairs, and then toss the glassware out closed windows. I add that if it is likely that she or her children can have the stones replaced, a thin casing of gold might be wrapped around the stoneless portion of the setting, leaving it intact underneath. But the probability is that the whole setting is weak and making it solid would be best as well as easiest and cheapest.

Weatherman Sees Unsettled Skies

Thundershowers Expected in State; 77 Degrees Here Today

The spring fever season was in full swing today as Appleton and vicinity enjoyed another spell of sunshine, blue skies, and budding trees.

The weatherman sees unsettled weather tomorrow, however, predicting local showers throughout the state and cooler temperatures in Appleton and vicinity.

Warm breezes and an enthusiastic sun showed the mercury up again today, but it couldn't match yesterday's rampage. The thermometer atop the Post-Crescent registered 77 degrees early this afternoon. The coldest reading during the 24-hour period ended at 9 o'clock this morning was 47, according to charts at the Wisconsin Michigan Power company.

Although spring fever claimed many new victims today, cooler weather and thundershowers are rushing into the midwest to rescue many of the afflicted golf courses, baseball parks, and just parks, the Associated Press reported. Heavy rains fell during the last 24 hours in the southwest and light rains in the northeast and great plains states.

Charles City, Ia., and Washington, D. C., tied for high honors in the nation yesterday, each with 90 degrees. Lander, Wyo., had 30.

Golf note: A young lady who prefers to remain anonymous decided the other day she would make last year's golf balls look real spick and span by cleaning them with soap and warm water.

She put 11 of them in a kettle of water, placed the kettle on the stove to warm it a bit, and went away for awhile. When she returned, the water was boiling merrily, and the golf balls, which by that time had split their covers like cooked wieners and were all shapes and sizes.

DELAY IN BERLIN

Berlin—(AP)—Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, taking the British prime minister at his word that Sir Neville Henderson is charged with no special mission, was in no hurry to receive his Britannic majesty's ambassador today.

Henderson, who returned to Berlin yesterday after an absence since March 17—after Germany's dismembered, Czechoslovakia—hoping to see von Ribbentrop this morning.

But the foreign minister's office informed the British embassy that Ribbentrop would not be in today.

A Wilhelmstrasse spokesman pointed out that the foreign minister is a very busy man these days, what with supplying information to Chancellor Hitler for his reichstag speech Friday, preparing himself for negotiations with the Yugoslav foreign minister who is to arrive today, and arranging for an approaching visit of the Hungarian premier and his foreign minister.

It seemed obvious to inquiring correspondents that Henderson must either contradict Prime Minister Chamberlain, who told the house of commons yesterday that the ambassador's resuming his post had "no special significance," or risk not being received before the reichstag speech is delivered, and possibly not before May day exercises.

Belgrade—(AP)—Yugoslavia will make no new commitments to Germany, Alexander Cincina-Markovitch, the foreign minister, said today before departing for Berlin.

The foreign office explained the foreign minister "seeks information, not treaties" and that in his talks with the Germans he would ask for clarification of certain questions raised in conversations with the Italian foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, during the weekend.

leaders predicting a host of job-holders would move on the capitol at once, fearful that mergers would mean demotion or loss of positions.

Need Strong "Tools"
"In these days of ruthless attempts to destroy democratic government," the president said in his message transmitting the plan, "it is badly asserted that democracies must be weak in order to be democratic at all; and that, therefore, it will be easy to crush all free states out of existence."

"Confident in our republic's 150 years of successful resistance to all subversive attempts upon it, whether from without or within, nevertheless we must be constantly alert to the importance of keeping the tools of American democracy up to date."

"It is our responsibility to make sure that the peoples' government is in condition to carry out the people's will, promptly, effectively, without waste or lost motion. . . .

"We Can Be Tough"
"We are not free if our administration is weak. But we are free if we know, and others know, that we are strong; that we can be tough as well as tender-hearted; and that what the American people decide to do can and will be done, capably and effectively, with the best national equipment that modern organizing ability can supply in a country where management and organization is so well understood in private affairs."

Mr. Roosevelt said his whole purpose in submitting the plan was to "improve the administrative management of the republic, and I feel confident that our nation is united in this central purpose, regardless of differences upon details."

He added that the plan was concerned with the "practical necessity of reducing the number of agencies which report directly to the president and also of giving the president assistance in dealing with the entire executive branch by modern means of administrative management."

Invite Supervisors to Pioneer Society Meet

Outagamie county supervisors have been invited to attend a meeting of the Outagamie County Pioneer and Historical society at 8 o'clock Thursday evening at the courthouse. While the invitations did not mention the nature of the meeting, it is expected that the disposal of the historical Grignon home and property at Kaukauna will be one of the topics of discussion.

physical impossibility for one man to deal with so many agencies. He added that the six administrative assistants he is authorized to employ under the reorganization act will not perform functions of overall management and direction because their task will be to "help me get information and condense and summarize it—they are not to become in any sense assistant presidents nor are they to have any authority over anybody in any department or agency."

Must Ease Burden
The only way in which the president can be relieved of the "physically impossible task" of dealing directly with 30 or 40 major agencies is by reorganization, Mr. Roosevelt declared.

He added it was obviously impracticable to complete the task at one time and therefore it would be undertaken in "several steps."

"The first step," he said, "is to improve overall management, that is, to do those things which will accomplish the purposes set out in the law, and which, at the same time, will reduce the difficulties of the president in dealing with the multifarious agencies of the executive branch and assist him in distributing his responsibilities as the chief administrator of the government by providing him with the necessary organization and machinery for better administrative management."

Other Necessary Steps
"The second step is to improve the allocation of departmental activities, that is, to do those things which will accomplish the purposes set out in the law and at the same time help that part of the work of the executive branch which is carried on through executive departments and agencies. In all this, the responsibility to the people is through the president."

"The third step is to improve intradepartmental management, that is, to do those things which will enable the heads of departments and agencies the better to carry out their own duties and distribute their own work among their several assistants and subordinates."

"Each of these three steps may require from time to time the submission of one or more plans involving one or more reorganizations but it is my purpose to fulfill the duty imposed upon me by the congress as expeditiously as practicable and to the fullest extent possible in view of the exceptions and exemptions set out in the fact."

Cites Early Efforts

Mr. Roosevelt reviewed attempts at government reorganization as far back as 1883, when President Arthur "strengthened the machinery of democracy" by the civil service law.

"None of all this long series of suggestions, running over more than a quarter of a century, was in any sense personal or partisan in design," he said.

"These measures have all had only one supreme purpose—to make democracy work—to strengthen the arms of democracy in peace or war and to ensure the solid blessings of free government to our people in increasing measure."

Declares Dental and Medical Professions Are Closely Related

Milwaukee—(AP)—Brigadier General Leigh C. Fairbank, chief of the United States army dental corps, told the Wisconsin State Dental society yesterday that the dental and medical professions have become inseparably correlated.

The close relationship began, he said, in the treatment of World war facial casualties, and has continued through automobile accidents involving injuries to the teeth and mouth.

"I fully expect," General Fairbank said, "the day will come when every dentist will be an M. D. as well."

Dr. T. A. Hardgrove of Fond du Lac explained the treatment of the doloceaux by the use of typhoid vaccine. Others discussing technical subjects included Dr. W. B. Thompson, Los Angeles, and Dr. W. H. Wright of Pittsburgh, president of the National Society of Denture Prosthetists.

Eleven juniors from Appleton High school have been selected by the American Legion post to attend the Badger Boys State, which will be in session June 17 to 24 at St. John's Military Academy, Delafield. Nine alternates also were chosen.

The Legion's choice for Appleton is David Bliss, Robert Sager, Roland Vogt, William Mullen, Tom Norlan, Harold Weiland, Robert Wilch, James Sherry, John Hammer, Robert Feuerstein and Charles Rollins. The alternates are Ralph Junge, Paul Kleist, Don Smith, Robert Otto, Don Bohl, Fred Trezise, Don Heinritz, Robert Dettman and Armin Scheurle. Original nominations were offered by junior sponsors and the final selections were made by Legion representatives including Fred Heinritz, Frank Wheeler and H. H. Heible, principal of the high school. Leadership will be the sole basis for judgement.

The fee per boy at Boys State is $15. Service organizations in Appleton contributed the funds necessary to send the 11 delegates. The summer camp is sponsored by the Alonzo Cudworth post of the Legion with the purpose of teaching the fundamental principles of American government through actual practice.

When the boys reach the campus at Delafield, they will be divided into cities and counties. The entire assemblage of 600 will function for the week as a mythical 49th state according to the constitutional procedure of Wisconsin. The boys will have their own city and county councils and elect their officials from the governor down. They will present and argue their own bills and will conduct their departments of public welfare, thus learning how the principles of democratic government are implemented.

Heible is state Americanization chairman for the American Legion and will be one of the men in charge at the camp.

and asks her pupils to be sure to bring paper and pencil to jot down suggestions as well as questions.

The daily gifts of a wide assortment are not the least of the attractive features of the cooking school, and in addition there is the free souvenir cook book which is given to each woman present. These contain not only the recipes and methods for preparing the various foods on each day's menu, but also a number of additional recipes which will be found just as toothsome as those which Miss Kidd makes on the stage.

Last year when Miss Kidd made her first bow to a Post-Crescent cooking school audience, it took only a few minutes for her to make herself right at home and for the women to feel that she was an old friend and had been coming to Appleton for years. Miss Kidd not only looks like a homemaker but has the easy-going disposition and the ability to appreciate a joke at her own expense which makes for a likeable personality.

In order to become a part of the fun and profit of the cooking school, all any woman has to do is secure her tickets for all four sessions at 10 cents each to make sure that there is a seat for her. The management suggests that tickets be secured well in advance, to avoid disappointment in the event that they are all sold before the opening of the school. Sessions will open at 9 o'clock each morning and will be over before noon.

Clare Major Players Will Stage 'Peter Pan' to Close Children's Theater Season

THE story of Peter Pan, the little boy who ran away to the Never-Never Land and became captain of the Lost Boys because he didn't want to be president when he grew up, will be retold to Appleton children on the stage of Lawrence Memorial chapel at 3:30 next Tuesday afternoon, May 2, by Clare Tree Major Children's theater.

Peter Pan never outgrew his love for stories, so the play tells us, and when Mrs. Darling used to tell them to her children, Wendy, Michael and John, Peter Pan would come and sit outside on the window ledge to listen. One evening when he was listening in this way he lost his shadow, and the next night after the children were in bed he went back to hunt for it. Jumping in at the window, accompanied by his pet fairy, Tinker-Bell, whom human children can see only as a dancing flash of light, Peter rummaged for his shadow. When he found it he couldn't get it to stay on Wendy, who had meanwhile awakened, sewed it on for him. He told her about the Never-Never Land where there are redskins, pirates and wolves as well as faeries, and finally Peter persuaded her and the other children to go with him.

In Never-Never Land the Lost Boys chose Wendy for their little mother and took her to their home, an underground cave among the roots of trees. Captain Hook and his pirate band were arch enemies of Peter, but Hook had an enemy too, a crocodile which had swallowed an alarm clock that ticked loudly and warned of its approach.

One day the pirates vanquished the redskins, and Captain Hook crept up to the house and poured poison into a harmless medicine which Wendy had left for Peter. Before Peter could drink it Tinker-Bell swallowed it and was about to die but was saved by the reassuring message that children still believe in faeries.

Wendy and her brothers, on their way home, were captured by the pirates, but Peter rescued them and they reached home safely. They begged Peter to remain with them, but he did not want to have to grow up like other children, so he went back to Never-Never Land where Wendy visited him each year to do his spring housecleaning.

NO DUNKING
Dunking Garments is CHEAP!
To clean them thoroughly in a pure solvent requires an investment!
Keeping the solvent clean is one of the most important points in the cleaning industry; otherwise filth and grime removed from someone's clothes would be transferred to another garment.

It's like changing the water in the bowl after washing again in the same water, over and over, what a mess you'd be.

And remember clothes get just as dirty, whether they are black or white.

German Songs Are Feature of Club Banquet

THE strains of beloved old German songs sung by 70 lusty young voices echoed through the halls of the Hearstone Tea room Monday night as members of the Appleton High school German club gathered for their annual banquet.

German poetry, music and comedy skills provided the program, and even the menu, featuring "Hühnerchen," mock chicken legs, were written in German. James Doran, toastmaster at the banquet, was introduced by Richard Elias, president of the club. Miss Dorothy Heilig gave a short history of the club.

Among the guests of honor were the first officers and honor members of the club, Mr. and Mrs. Orme Stach, Wilmer Stach and Miss Ellen Balliet.

The program included the reading of Goethe's poem, "Das Veilchen," by Miss Bernice Bleick, a discussion on "Mauerblumchen," or wallflowers, by Albert Wickesberg, and a comedy skit, "In Blumenladen," or "In the Flower Shop," by Ray Thomas, Robert Sager, Donald Bohl and Olin Mead.

Music for the evening was furnished by a girls' vocal quintet and two violinists. The quintet, composed of Charlotte Ziemann, Margaret Baumer, Margaret Brewer, Dorothy Herrmann and Esther Hattner, accompanied by Arlene Greb, sang "Sommer's Letzte Rose" and "Freut Euch Des Lebens." Edwenda Abel and Annabell Dorman played the violin duet, accompanied by Ellen Mae Arnold.

Community singing of German songs took place between courses, the favorite being a German translation of "Little Sir Echo" in which Warren Buesing supplied a creditable echo.

Ruth Gaud announced the names of 11 candidates for the German honor student whose name will be engraved on the German honor plaque. The winner will be announced on awards day. The singing of "Guten Abend, Gut Nacht" closed the banquet.

Health Clinics To be Conducted In County in May

Schedule Is Announced By Miss Marie Klein, Nurse

May, observed throughout the state as child health month, will be marked in Outagamie county by a series of health clinics for examination and vaccination for small pox and diphtheria. It was announced today by Miss Marie Klein, county nurse.

Consent cards for the vaccinations are being sent to the rural school teachers to be signed by parents wanting their children treated. Letters containing health suggestions also are being sent to the parents.

Emphasis will be placed on "nutrition in relation to health" during the month. Parents are reminded by Miss Klein that children should be given plenty of rest and exercise and they play an important part in building up the body. Children should be taken to a physician for regular examinations, the county nurse said, and clinics should be attended when parents cannot afford to pay for private examinations.

Ten clinics will be held during May and they are being financed jointly by the county health department and the Outagamie County Health association.

Following is the schedule: Dale public school, 10 a. m., May 2; Kimberly Club house, 1 p. m., May 4; Hortonville Village hall, 1 p. m., May 9; Black Creek Legion hall, 1 p. m., May 11; Shiocton public school, 9 a. m., May 12; Little Chute public school, 1 p. m., May 16; Seymour Legion hall, 9 a. m., and 1:30 p. m., May 18; Freedom High school, 1 p. m., May 25; Combined Locks public school, 1 p. m., May 26; and Appleton Woman's club, 9 a. m., May 26.

Fewer Jobs but More Hours and Pay Last Month

State Industry Paid Out More Wages Than in March, 1938

Madison — (P) — Wisconsin manufacturing industries had fewer employees last month than in March, 1938 but provided more working hours and paid out a greater sum in total wages, the state industrial commission reported today.

The number of jobs increased from 203,000 to 205,000 from last February 15 to March 15 and while this total was 2,000 under March of last year corresponding weekly payrolls were 6 per cent higher and total hours worked about 5 per cent greater.

Machinery manufacturing showed a 3.3 per cent gain in employment and a 3.6 per cent increase in payrolls from February to March. The automotive industry experienced a slight decrease. Non-durable goods industries were about the same as the previous month except for a slight decrease in the textile classification.

"Reports from 452 manufacturing establishments in the city of Milwaukee showed an increase of 1.2 per cent in employment and 1.6 per cent in weekly payrolls between Feb. 15 and March 15," the commission said. "These gains are slightly larger than the corresponding gains in the state as a whole."

High Monthly Average

"Employees in Milwaukee manufacturing industries averaged weekly earnings of $27.75 in March, exceeding the average for any previous month since August, 1937. This increase was the result of increased hours of work. Employees averaged 38.3 hours per week in March as compared with 35 in March a year ago."

Private building contractors had a small decrease in employment and a narrow increase in payrolls.

General merchandise stores took on an additional 2,000 employees to handle the spring trade during March, causing a 3 per cent employment increase in the retail trade classification. Total retail employment was 107,300 or 2,000 less than a year ago, while payrolls aggregated $2,109,000 a week, or $64,000 less than last year. The average weekly wage in stores last month was $19.67.

Monte Pearson in First Victory for New York Yankees

Beats Macks, 2 to 1; 15 Walks Help White Sox Top Indians

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Monte Pearson went to the post for the first time this season and pitched the Yankees to a tight 2 to 1 victory over the Athletics, before a crowd of 5,820 fans who turned out to welcome the world champions back to their home park.

The stylish right hand gave up only four hits, no more than one an inning. Although the Yankees were able to tag Nelson Potter and Chubb by Dean for only three safe blows, one of these was a homer by Fred Rolfe in the sixth. The other Yankee run came in the seventh, when Dean lost his control and walked two men, and Skene Newsome fumbled a ground ball to let the tally across.

WALKS HELP CHI SOX

Cleveland.—(AP)—Fifteen bases on balls walked the Chicago White Sox into a 9-4 victory over Cleveland's Indians in the season's opener Monday.

Johnny Allen made his first league pitching appearance for the Tribe—since an elbow ailment put him on the shelf last summer.

Johnny Humphries, five walks helped the Sox to a three run second inning lead. Tom Drake replaced him that inning and succeeded in handing out 10 free tickets himself with two out. Allen, who looked like he had all his stuff and speed, was nipped for one run on a double, single and error in the ninth.

Lefty Lee, Chicago slab artist, gave up eight hits. The Chicagoans collected was 10.

Gabby Hartnett Picks Dizzy to Toss Against Sox Monday

Chicago.—(AP)—When the Chicago Cubs and White Sox play next Monday in the Monty Stratton benefit game Dizzy Dean will be the starting pitcher for the National leaguers.

So said Manager Gabby Hartnett today, adding that he thought the loquacious right hander was about ready for regular duty in the Cub league games.

"I figure that Dizzy's appearance will help the game," Hartnett said, "and I think it's important that we draw as many as possible to that game."

"More than that, however, it will give me a chance to start Dizzy working toward real pitching shape. It won't be long after Monday until you'll see Dean pitching for us in the National league race."

Sutton, the White Sox pitching coach of last season, lost a leg in a hunting accident during the off season. Wearing an artificial leg, he is now one of the Sox coaches on Manager Jimmy Dykes' staff.

Buck Marrow went the route for the last-place Brewers' second victory in eight starts, getting the decision over Norbert (Nubs) Kleinke, veteran right-hander from Fond du Lac, Wis., making his first start for Columbus.

The Brewers scored three runs in the sixth when Justin Stein singled with the bases full and Ted Gullic followed with a double.

Henry J. Bendering, president of the Brewers, announced the purchase of third baseman Johnny Hill, 26, from the Boston Bees. Hill, a left-handed batsman, hit .338 for Atlanta last season to lead the Southern association.

The Brewers planned a workout at Borchert field, Milwaukee, today, before their home opener tomorrow with Indianapolis.

Nova Considers Baer Bout Just A Warm-Up For Go With Louis

BY GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Lou Nova, the most promising young heavyweight of them all, is here for a couple of days limbering up his valuable muscles prior to going into hard training for his June 1 engagement with Max Baer at Yankee stadium.

He's as cocksure as ever, so calmly certain he will beat Baer and then win the title from Joe Louis in September that it doesn't seem worth while to argue the matter with him. After his first flurried reply "Baer? Sure, he'll make a good warm-up for me. We kept the conversation centered upon Nova.

Lou hasn't had a fight since he defeated and almost knocked out Tommy Farr in the Garden last December. Instead, he has taken an intensive course of boxing lessons from Bob McAllister out on the coast, and now thinks he's ready for the big push.

"I've learned more about fighting from McAllister in the last few months than I could have learned in a dozen fights," he declared. "McAllister was one of the cleverest of them all. He's taught me the finer points both of defense and offense."

"I noticed for the first time that he has an abnormally long reach. It isn't apparent when he fights, because most of his blows are short and sharp, with the weight of his body behind them."

Museum Authority Describes Indian Culture for Lions

Arthur Kannenberg, Oshkosh, Tells of Archeological Excavations

Menasha — Indian culture of the Winnebago tribe as revealed through archeological discoveries on the east shore of Lake Winnebago was described by Arthur Kannenberg, official of the Oshkosh public museum, in a talk before the Menasha Lions club Monday night at Hotel Menasha. The speaker illustrated his discussion with examples of Indian bone, copper, pottery and stone work excavated from mounds in the county.

Mr. Kannenberg urged members of the club to lend their efforts to a project making a county park out of the 60-acre village site on Lake Winnebago in order to preserve these relics because of their scientific value. A resolution to purchase the land failed in the county board last year.

The Winnebago Indians were known as the "people of the stinking waters," Mr. Kannenberg said, because of numerous dead fish which lined the shores. The land was a fertile hunting and fishing region. A group of Iroquois and Illinois Indians followed the water route to Lake Winnebago in 1678. About 200 of them wintered on Doty and Garlic islands when they became snowbound.

Were Cannibals

The Winnebago Indians became suspicious and feared that the Illinois were spies so they killed the entire company and ate them, for they were cannibals. That bit of Indian history was substantiated in evidence uncovered in excavations in 1935 and 1936.

The 60-acre plot described by the speaker contains garden beds, burial plots, shell mounds, fire places and all sorts of tools and implements of bone and stone. Remains of food have been found in some of the pottery while ashes still remain in the fireplace. Although the site is estimated to be over 700 years old, the relics appear as if they had been inhabited only a year ago.

The early work in archeology was done by P. V. Lawson, former Menasha mayor, who visited Lasey's point and wrote descriptions of evidence that led him to believe that the place must have been a former Indian village site. That survey was made in 1911. Only recently Mr. Kannenberg went over that report and then started excavating. Much of the work was carried on in 1937 and 1938.

Revised Theories

Many of the discoveries revealed facts about Winnebago Indian culture never before realized and have forced the Milwaukee museum to revise its entire theories on Winnebago culture, the speaker said. Found in the mounds were eyed bone needles, arrow heads of antler prongs and deer hooves, painted pottery, bird decorations, jewelry of copper and a picturegraph portraying an Indian.

The relics seem to indicate that the Winnebago Indians had a higher culture than the average Indians of the region. Only five of the mounds in the area have been opened but packed within the 60-acre area are 56 other mounds.

The speaker also presented a parchment for inspection which he said is the only existing peace treaty signed by the Winnebago Indians and the government.

The treaty was signed by John Quincy Adams, president of the United States, and 14 Indian chiefs, including the ruler of the Doty island tribe, in 1828. The parchment was offered for sale to the museum by a son of Axel Jacobson, Indian agent many years ago at Wittenberg, Wis. Unfortunately the museum is operating on a limited budget and has no funds for the purchase.

Select Boys to Attend Camp at Military School

Youths Will Learn Fundamentals of Government During 8-Day Stay

Neenah — John Palmer, Neenah High school junior, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Palmer, route 2, has been selected by the Neenah chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, for the Badger Boys State camp, June 17-24 at St. John's Military academy at Delafield. The camp, sponsored by the American Legion, post, American Legion, Milwaukee, is an effort on the part of the American Legion to bring to the boys of Wisconsin, knowledge of the fundamental principles of American government through actual practice in duties of the city, county and state offices for the period of the Boys State.

James Webb, another Neenah High school junior, has been named by the James P. Hawley American Legion Auxiliary unit as the person it will sponsor at the Boys State camp. The auxiliary also contributed to the state in monetary form.

The Menasha American Legion post will send representative young men from Menasha, and it is probable that the Neenah post will sponsor a boy.

Cost is $15.

American Legion posts or units, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Rotary, Kiwanis, Lion's club, Knights of Columbus, Elks or other civic, patriotic or religious groups may sponsor boys at the camp. The cost for the entire 8-day period is $15.

The Boys State this year will be limited to 600 boys and when the young men gather at the campus of the military academy, they will be divided into cities and counties and the entire assemblage will become the mythical forty-ninth state which will function for eight days according to the laws of procedure of the state of Wisconsin.

In substance, the program is designed to teach the boys that there is nothing fundamentally wrong with the American form of government, that it has not outlived its usefulness, that what it demands is intelligent citizenry and a clean, honest and impartial administration. The boys will elect all officials from the governor down. They will have their own city governments, council members, police department, and will live as self-governing citizens the full week.

Non-Partisan Program

The entire program is non-partisan and is not military in any sense. It has been pointed out. There will be no propaganda. The sole purpose is to enable the boy to grasp the meaning of some of the governmental tasks his parents are being asked to solve.

Harry A. Stuhldreher, head football coach and athletic director at the University of Wisconsin, will be athletic director at the Boys State and Joseph Steinauer, swimming coach, University of Wisconsin, will direct swimming.

The boys will be under the direct charge of a camp director and a staff of men who have had previous camp experience and who are qualified as teachers of government. These counselors will be men of high ideals and characters.

Day's Program

A typical day's program will be reveille, calisthenics and flag raising, breakfast, cleaning and inspection of uniforms, in which, until noon, all offices in the city, county and state governments will be functioning. During the afternoon, the criminal, civil and supreme courts will be in session. Swimming, organized athletics, team competitions and sports of all kinds will feature afternoon activities also. Informal discussion in city groups will precede the dinner hour after which recreation, entertainment, general assembly, sports, movies and recreation will continue until lights out at 10 o'clock.

A HERO, BUT QUIET ABOUT IT

Menasha — Richard Catlin, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Catlin, 414 Elm street, shown above, has three rescues to his "good deed" records although only immediate friends of the family have heard about them. Dick rescued three of his playmates from the river during the last 12 months when they fell into deep water in the river by the Memorial building while playing.

Menasha Boy Is Credited With Three Water Rescues

Menasha — Tennis, airplanes and a turtle are among the immediate interests of Richard "Dick" Catlin, 11 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Catlin, 414 Elm street, but Dick as he prefers to be called, is one of those unsung heroes. He has rescued three playmates from the river but only his immediate family and friends have known about it.

In November, 1937, when George Nelson, formerly of Appleton was visiting at the Catlin home, the boys were playing in the park and George, garbed in a heavy chinchilla coat and leggings fell into the river. It was Dick who pulled him out.

Last summer, Ted "Pudgie" Gilbert was climbing on the slide in the park and slipped into the river, over his head. Dick disclaims credit for this rescue, declaring "Pudgie helped a lot 'cause he knew how to swim a little."

The third rescue to Dick's credit was made last January when Dickie Hill, son of the Earl Hill's of Menasha, ventured through the ice, river and crashed through the ice. Dick Catlin pulled him out. When asked how he did it, Dick just said that he read in a book somewhere that one should lie down on the ice and pull the person in the water up and out.

Zephyr Gridders Study Movies to Begin Spring Work

Practice Session Will be Held at Seventh Street Park

Menasha — Spring football at St. Mary High school started Monday afternoon when Coach Marvin J. Miller issued a call for candidates. Moving pictures of several games were shown to the prospective griders.

Practices will be held at the Seventh street park. Weather conditions have prevented outdoor drill up to this time but in the period remaining, Coach Miller hopes to drill his candidates on fundamentals as well as to get a line on the material he will have to replace the players lost by graduation.

An intersquad game will end the spring training session. The spring drill is expected to be quite strenuous for one of the most difficult schedules in the history of the school. In addition to such traditional rivals as St. Mary's of DePere, St. John's of Little Chute, Kaukauna and Neenah, the Zephyrs will play New London, also of the Northeastern Wisconsin conference, and Edgewood of Madison. The feature game of the day, though, will be against St. John Military academy of Delafield.

Graduation Losses

Missing from the team next year will be such stars as Fred Picard, end; Reuben Prunskis, center; Bob Schwarzbauer, tackle; Frank Schipferling, quarterback, and Eugene Laux and Koerner, halfbacks and Coen.

Even so the Zephyrs probably will have a strong line with experienced players although several of the players may perform in new positions. Ends may be Farnham Johnson and Tommy Day

MovieLand Its People and Products

BETTE DAVIS—who has won fame by her portrayal of so many tempestuous heroines—is noted off-screen for her keen sense of humor—and her skill at horsemanship riding, golf and swimming. She is said to have been the only woman who ever qualified as a lifeguard at the fashionable Ogunquit Beach in her native Massachusetts, before her Hollywood days.

By Jimmie Fidler

Hollywood—After a preview the other night, our gang dropped into a nearby bar to dissect the picture. Someone mentioned the performance of the leading lady—a really fine performance that any actress might have been proud of—and instantly provoked a chorus. "Yeah, swell piece of work... but, say wouldn't you like to see Bette Davis in that role?" And it occurred to me that Bette has become a No. 1 handicap to every other girl in Hollywood.

She is our ne plus ultra, our sacred yardstick by which all other actresses are measured—and found wanting before the trial is fairly begun! She is a very great actress—but she is also a fad. And where, in all Hollywood, lives the man or woman with courage enough to challenge a fad? If it's a Bette Davis performance, it's colossal—and you're a pariah unless you admit it, even before you've seen the picture!

Charles Chaplin holds the same fetid rating where comedy is concerned. At his infrequent previews, the biggest producers and biggest stars embrace microphones and weep tears of admiration for his genius. And since they act like sheep with a follow-the-leader urge, I'll say my "bah" by pointing out that any other comic who dared to use Chaplain's outmoded, creaky technique would be scoffed out of town.

In Bette's case, the praise is deserved—but why deny every other capable actress the right to be judged on the merit of her own work? Why not admit that Bette is great in her own pictures—and give all other actresses a chance to be great in theirs without indulging in comparisons which are becoming odious?

Odd-Formation: Una Merkel and Lucille Ball are remotely related to George Washington.

Regular Yacht Club trophies will be awarded winners in the championship series. It also was decided that Saturday races during the championship series will be counted toward the trophies, and the schedule of events for Sundays has been left optional so that a number of novelty events can be scheduled.

About 70 boats will be competing for trophies this season, and the fleet will be augmented by a new boat, three E boats and two X boats.

The annual Inland Lakes Yachting association regatta will be held Aug. 21 to 26 at Lake Minnetonka, Minn., and there will be special invitational regattas for Class C, E, and X boats sponsored by the association. The locations and dates for these regattas haven't been determined.

MEN WHO BUILD HOUSES

VII—The Lather

In times gone by, long, narrow wooden laths were nailed on the inside walls of a new house. That doesn't happen very much nowadays.

In the last 10 years, the rock lath or plaster board has come into its own, and so has the so-called "wire lath." Up-to-date new houses do not have wooden laths. A lathing expert tells me they are "out, except for patching."

Putting laths in new house.

We may say goodbye to the wooden lath without too much weeping. It was tinder for a fire inside the walls of homes. Many of the older type of houses would not have burned down so quickly if it had not been for such laths.

Watching lathers at work, I have noticed that the great speed. They handle pieces of rock lath, each 16 by 48 inches, and put them in place so fast that a person wonders how they can do it. I timed a lather, and found he drove in five nails in five seconds. He wasn't "trying for a record," but was just working in his usual way.

"The lathing trade is the fastest in the world," says R. V. Fessenden, a man who has been in the field for many years and now has a large crew of assistants. He happens also to be a billiard player who time and again has won championships, and has promised some day to teach me fine points of the game.

"A lather drives in about 20 nails for each board," he added. "The boards are made of plaster, and are coated with paper. They will crumble in fire, but the plaster in them does not burn. Another good thing about the rock lath is that it does not shrink."

The lather pounds nails with a lather's hatchet. This serves as a hammering tool on one side, and on the other side it has a small, sharp blade which is valuable for cutting a crease across a piece of the rock lath. After the cut is made, it is a simple thing to break the board neatly along the line. This is done to fit the laths in corners, and around windows and doors.

In a day's work, a lather may drive from 6,000 to 12,000 nails. It takes one man about half a day to put the laths on a room 10 feet wide, 12 feet long and eight feet high. He can do two such rooms in a day.

The lathers are so well practiced in speed that they have kept it up in putting on wire lath. Being made of metal, this kind of lath holds back fire even better than rock lath.

Strips of wire lath come in different sizes. They may be from 16 to 32 inches wide, and have a length of eight feet.

soap from his pocket and strolled over to the still shouting Mike. "Gimme your handkerchief, Zeb. Got one? Fine."

As Slade opened his mouth for a good bit of oratory, Asey inserted the soap, and then tied the handkerchief so that the soap would stay in place.

"There, that's the old-fashioned treatment for small boys, Slade, an' you deserve it. How—where?"

Bristling with undercurrents, Madame Meaux had crossed over to the couch; she watched Eloise dispassionately for a moment, and then leaned over and slapped her face. It was a resounding slap, and it made Eloise blink.

"Another peep out of you, and you get another," Madame Meaux announced. "And then some. No wonder you lead a single life if you act like this very often."

She returned to her arm chair and lighted another cigarette. The silence was electric, bristling with undercurrents.

"Well, really," Mrs. Brinley said. "I never saw anything quite so brutal—"

"But how effective!" Asey said. "how effective! Kay, is that coffee? Sara, feed your guests, an'—ah, there's the doc."

They got Eloise upstairs. "I'll look after her," Cummings said. "I don't know what's going on down there, but it looks as though you were needed, Asey. Why must some women be like this? Her digestion'll be all shot for a week, and it's none too good anyway. I've told her a thousand times to lay off that medicated hay and straw. What she stuffs into her stomach in the guise of food would leave anyone itching for hysterics, just for sheer relief."

Asey went back to the living room. He had a task before him, and he didn't look forward to it.

He went straight to the point.

"Mrs. Brinley," he tried to make his voice solemn, "you an' your husband have been the victims of a plot."

Mrs. Brinley squealed and looked around her anxiously, as though something on the order of an octopus was about to pounce on her from a corner.

"Slade," Asey pointed to the figure on the floor. "I was telling your husband about it when you came. Slade wanted to get out two why Weston asked me to come over here. To forestall anything like this. Now, he's turned to the trooper, 'do you know anything about any murder? You don't, do you?'"

"No, sir!"

"Zeb? No. Jeff, if there had been a murder, you'd know about it, wouldn't you?"

"Good gracious," Jeff said in his best Mr. Guffey's staccato manner. "What brought this matter up? It's preposterous! Murders, indeed! Was that what Slade has been saying? Why, the idea!"

"Aunt Sara swallowed hard. 'Now, Miss Thayer, you're a reporter. Have you heard of any reports about a murder?'"

"If I had a whole fat murder story staring me in the face," Kay said with utter truthfulness, "I should not be here. I promise you that."

"Ruthless Publicity Seeker!"

"There," Asey said, "see? It's a horrible thing, Mrs. Brinley, but you see, you an' your husband is influential, an' Slade knew if he could start a story through you, people would believe it. It's—uh—exploit-in. The—uh—rich, I mean, the influential folks always gets this sort of thing in any community. You was been exploited by a ruthless publicity seeker, that's what."

"Ruthless!" Jeff Leach said. "It's dastardly!"

"Just so. Now, for the best interests of everything, Mrs. Brinley, Zeb'll take you home. You an' your guest. I want you to leave the rest to me. I," he added meaningfully, "will fix this, I will!"

"Nip it in the bud," Sara helped him out.

"I want justice!" Mrs. Brinley began to lapse into her Women's Club manner. "I want justice, and justice will be done! Justice, or—"

"There's only one thing," Asey said, "an' Jeff'll agree with me. If there's any scandal now, with the Old Home Week goin' on—well, I certainly would hate to think of the effect."

He talked on until he was tired, and then Sara came to his rescue. She had never in the past been very cordial to Mrs. Brinley, but she made up for it.

At last the Brinleys gave in. To save Billingsgate to leave unmarried the escutcheon of Billingsgate and Old Home Week, they would forget their personal feelings. They would leave everything to Asey. They would never mention the affair. Never whisper about it.

Zeb drove them home in Asey's roadster. Madame Meaux, who had also allowed herself to be persuaded to save the town, winked at Asey as she left.

"What an M.C.," she said, "show business lost in you! I'll lay it on some more for you when they act back."

Finally Cummings got Eloise to sleep, and Asey got the rest of the household off to bed.

"What are you going to do with him?" the doctor pointed to Slade. "Him an' me is going to have a little session out in the barn. Help us take him out doc. There's been enough to do in this house for one night."

After Slade had been deposited on the barn floor, Asey turned to the trooper.

"Go on back an' see none of them folks decide to come help us after all," he said. "If they don't get to sleep right away, they'll probably decide to lumber out an' assist."

He removed the handkerchief and the piece of soap from Slade's mouth and stood back to await the torrent of abuse he fully expected would issue forth.

But Slade just lay there sullenly and never uttered a word.

Asey looked at him thoughtfully. He could see how someone like Jane would fall for a fellow like that. Slade was no moving picture idol; his nose was too long and his mouth too wide, but his dark hair had the sort of crinkly wave in it that women seemed to like, and his black eyes had probably made any number of conquests. About thirty-five, Asey decided. Younger than he as first thought. And even though hand and foot, there was a tremendous vigor about him.

"Huh," he said, "I can see where you would make Zeb Chase look like skim milk. An' I see why Sara gave you a chance. Slade, what's the big idea?"

Seek Singer to Benefit By Dame Melba's Will

Melbourne—Search is being made throughout Australia and New Zealand for "another Melba" so that the terms of the late Dame Nellie Melba's will can be fulfilled. Dame Nellie provided a scholarship valued at £300 ($1,500) for a singer, with directions that search be made.

It has been found that talented sinners in remote places cannot travel to Melbourne to compete for the scholarship, and plans are being made to establish elimination centers in distant areas.

TUESDAY, APRIL 25, 1939

RIO THEATRE

APPLETON, WIS.

Varied Program at Annual Fisherman's Party

Music, Pictures, Speeches, Prizes Occupy Evening

Excellent Entertainment Offered Record Breaking Crowd Tonight

A varied program which will please everyone and yet move rapidly features this evening's third annual Post-Crescent Fishermen's party at the Rio theatre. It will be a program in keeping with the improved facilities for handling the party and the desire to make it better than ever.

- THE PROGRAM
8:15 P. M.
- Announcement and welcome.
  - Normandie trio
  - Motion picture, "Let's Go Fishing"
  - Talk, by Mark S. Catlin, Appleton, Wisconsin conservation commissioner.
  - Professor Ratzin de Garrett, inventor of goofy gadgets
  - Talk, by Ernest F. Swift, deputy director of the Wisconsin conservation department
  - Awarding of prizes, numbers to be drawn by Judge Fred V. Heinemann.
  - Orchestra music before program furnished by Jack Cameron and his band, Appleton.

should be over in less than two hours at which time drawing of prize numbers will start.

The first speaker will be John R. Riedl, managing editor of the Post-Crescent, who will welcome the crowd in behalf of the newspaper.

He will be followed by three young ladies from Art Searl's Normandie cocktail lounge who sing and play and who have been gaining a reputation as one of the best musical numbers in Wisconsin entertainment circles. The girls will present popular numbers and perhaps one or two of the "old time" group, and then close with a "jam session" that should get the evening's entertainment off to a flying start.

Motion Pictures

As soon as the girls complete their numbers the motion picture screen will be dropped together with the sound apparatus and the picture, "Let's Go Fishing," will be flashed onto the screen to run for approximately 16 minutes.

The picture will feature Tony Accetta, nationally known bait caster and fly fisherman, who can almost make a fish line and a lure talk. He shows how the dub errs and how, with a little work and patience, he can correct his faults. The picture also features comments by Ted Husing, nationally known sports announcer and commentator. The picture was secured through the courtesy of the Fisher Body Division of General Motors, Detroit, Mich.

With completion of the movies, Mark Catlin, Sr., Appleton, a member of the state conservation commission, and long active in conservation, will be introduced and give a short talk.

Vaudeville Program

Mr. Catlin will be followed by more vaudeville in the form of Professor Ratzin de Garrett, an inventor of goofy gadgets. The professor comes from Milwaukee and has appeared on the Columbia and National broadcasting systems and before hundreds of banquets, gatherings and meetings in the middle west. He is the inventor of the gadgets you often have thought about

MacKenzie Asks Cooperation in State's Effort to Save Fishing

BY H. W. MACKENZIE
Wisconsin Conservation Director

To the Fishermen of the Fox River Valley:

Mother Nature has been very lavish in her gifts to Wisconsin by providing extensive, diversified water areas that are not only beautiful in character, but also exceptionally productive of fish, game, birds and fur-bearing animals. While man has in many instances during the past been ruthless in his abuse of her gifts, a newer generation is today assisting in the restoration and rehabilitation of these resources, and a successful program of this kind can be satisfactorily advanced only through a rational procedure which will have no place for selfish motives. Nature in her operations does not consider the pleasure or convenience of a few individuals, but rather the entire scene, and in our endeavors to be of assistance we must likewise consider the conservation picture as a whole, and follow a program which will prove of utmost benefit to all of our citizens.

The Fox River Valley has been blessed with one of the finest great natural fish hatcheries existing in the world today and through sensible use of these waters they will continue being productive from a food-giving standpoint as well as a recreational and financial angle. Such a program of proper utilization will necessarily include the protection of fish during spawning seasons, for it is reasonable to conclude that if fish are taken during the time they are reproducing, a rapid decrease in numbers is inevitable. During the past few years progress has been made in restoring the fish population in this area. Let me assure you that our department will continue to provide every possible service to extend this program and in turn we earnestly solicit your wholehearted cooperation toward maintaining and increasing these valuable resources for future generations.

and never worked on because they'd probably brand you as a "nut." The point is the professor doesn't care.

For instance, he has invented—or may invent before your eyes—an ultra short wave set for detecting illegal residents in seemingly perfect eating apples, a device for replating anemic gold fish, a corn on the cob gadget that eliminates butter fingers and rings a bell when you get to the end of the cob, or a self-finding golf ball which sends up a puff of smoke and whistles.

When the professor leaves the stage, the program will turn to more serious things with Ernest F. Swift, deputy director of the Wisconsin conservation commission, as the speaker. He is second in command to Conservation Director H. W. MacKenzie.

Mr. Swift is a veteran of the World war and a former student at the University of Minnesota. He became connected with the state conservation commission as a warden in Forest county in 1926. He then transferred to the forest ranger service but returned to the enforcement division and was stationed at Hayward. In 1935 he became supervisor of fur farms with the conservation commission, a position he held until named deputy director.

He knows northern Wisconsin country from years of first hand contact and is able to tell almost everything about fishing.

With the completion of Mr. Swift's talk, the ticket stubs will be shuffled, Judge Fred V. Heinemann will draw the first number,

SENDS MESSAGE

H. W. MacKenzie, state director of conservation, prepared a special message to fishermen of the Fox river valley in connection with the Appleton Post-Crescent's Fishermen's party.

Pickrel Excellent Eating When Water Is Cold in Early Spring

Early in the year, while the water is still cold, pickrel are excellent pan fish. During ice fishing they are caught over a wide expanse of the northern United States and apart from being a bit more bony than some other fish, they certainly are just as good to eat.

Later on in the year pickrel in some waters get that "pike" smell to which some people object, and they will not be as firm as they are now, but in many sections where game fish are scarce they are highly prized at any time of the year.

Perhaps the best bait of all for pickrel is a nice fat minnow that is still alive, but they will take worms and other bait quite well, and many have been caught by using a strip of the white belly from one of their own kind, cut into the shape of a pork rind and used in much the same way. If one is going after these fellows with an artificial lure, don't overlook a spinner or a small spoon, or a large streamer or bucktail fly.

and then the second. They'll be placed in plain sight and one designated the number of the row-boat and the other the motor, the two featured prizes. They'll remain there until the two prizes are called. The procedure gives every person in the theatre a chance.

With the two big prize numbers out of the box, the other awards will be made just as fast as the numbers can be called and the winners located by a large corps of spotters and runners.

Commission Appointment Gives Chance to be of Help, Catlin Says

BY MARK S. CATLIN
Member of State Conservation Commission

There are probably amongst the readers of this short article a large lot of people who do not know much about the Conservation Commission of Wisconsin, how it works, what it does or who are its members.

As I am its newest member it would be rather out-of-place for me to attempt to tell you of its policies or what its plans for the future may be, but in taking up my duties with this group I do so hoping to give to Wisconsin and its people the very best service that I am capable of, and in the hope that I may contribute in my own way something constructive in a work that I have spent so much time in, and from which I have derived so much pleasure.

The Conservation Commission of Wisconsin is composed of six men: Mr. Goodman, the chairman, of Marinette, Mr. Browne of Wau-paca, Mr. Fischer of Shawano, Mr. Corcoran of Webster, Mr. Le Claire of Two Rivers, and yours truly of Appleton. This group of men sits in the capacity of a quasi-judicial body and pass on all conservation matters. Such conservation subjects do not deal with fish and game alone, but with all state parks, all state forestry and nursery projects, fire prevention and control, the state game farm, the large number of fish hatcheries, and the fish and game law enforcement matters. This body and the group of men under it have the expending of approximately $2,000,000 to run this vast organization.

Immediately under the Commission comes the director of the department, and under him come the heads of the fisheries, game, forestry and park, game farm and game warden departments and each of these have sub-heads, all of them experts in their own fields and all working to make Wisconsin a better and more attractive state from a conservation standpoint.

Perhaps you would be interested in the way conservation matters come before the commission. Let us say that a petition comes to the department to open or close some game or fish situation in some community. Some expert in the department is sent out to make a survey of the thing requested, a public hearing is held and the matter is heard publicly so that all parties may be heard. The testimony is taken down in writing. The heads of the department with the director then comes before the Commission, the reports are given and the matter is then discussed by the Commission and such action as they see fit upon all the evidence is taken.

This is only a rough sketch of how conservation matters are handled. I am sure that the other commissioners, together with every member of the department would join me in the hope that we may all do better and greater things for Wisconsin and for all of its people.

Size of Hall Only Limit to Size of Fisherman Party

Two Years Experience in Armory Dictated Move To Theater This Year

Starting in 1937 with a sellout crowd of 1,250 persons, the growth of the Post-Crescent Fishermen's Parties has been phenomenal. And if it could be permitted to grow unmolested by inability to seat people and distribute prizes over a reasonable period of time, the party probably could become a veritable mammoth.

The first party was held in late April of 1937 after almost three months of planning. The armory was selected as the place and the crowd was seated on chairs that jammed almost every inch of floor space. The featured prize was an outboard motor, smaller than the one now being offered.

Speakers were B. O. Webster, superintendent of fisheries for the Wisconsin Conservation commission, and Bert Claflin, an outdoor writer. The entertainment featured three young men from the Normandy cocktail lounge who since have skyrocketed to fame and played in New York city and Chicago spots for the last two years.

Following awarding of more than 100 prizes, the crowd was treated to free beer and perch and frog legs, in itself a big undertaking.

The party had been a sellout from the time tickets were put on sale and the success and the comments indicated that everyone would be looking forward to the 1938 show.

Last year's party saw 1,450 persons packed into the armory through the use of the high school bleachers and chairs, another top program, more and better prizes and beer and cold lunch. It too, was a sellout within a few hours after tickets went on sale.

The program opened with 40 minutes of motion pictures taken by R. C. Swanson, Appleton junior high school instructor, and much interested in fishing and conservation. The pictures were in color and showed an Appleton man, E. C. Moore, director of the high school band.

With Mr. Swanson commenting as the pictures were unreeled on the screen, and with appropriate accompanying music, the crowd was in a most pleasing fishing frame of mind. Not only were the pictures interesting but the color added a touch that practically neved you to start north the next morning.

After the motion pictures, Ozark Ripley, internationally known writer of the out-of-doors, fishing expert and lover of dogs, took the stage and gave an interesting talk.

The prize drawings followed and interest was keener than the year previous. The featured prize was an outboard motor, more powerful than the first offered, with a family built rowboat as the second award. The prizes totaled more than 125.

Following the prizes there again was free beer and cold meat lunches and the crowd lingered and talked things over until the small hours of the morning.

This year's party was moved to the Rio theater to provide more seating capacity, and more comfort. But again the tickets were sold within an hour after they were put on sale.

Wet Flies are Good Lure for Trout Fishing in Early Spring

BY O. WARREN SMITH

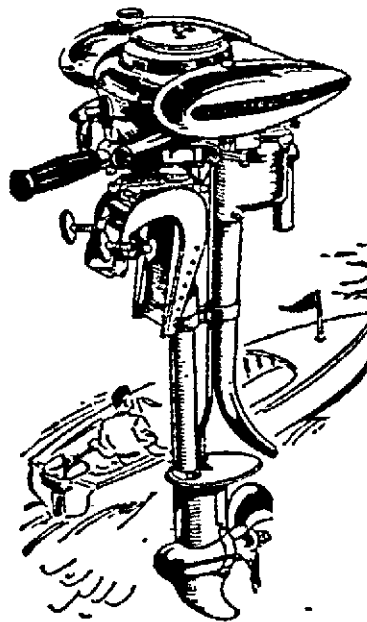

There is nothing more problematical than what fly to use in early spring, before many insects are to be seen upon the surface of the water. When trout are not in the habit of feeding upon flies, but are upon the bottom nosing about for worms, naturally a surface fly may not be noticed. It is possible to pinch a shot to the gut, just above the hook, and go down after them. Just why such a procedure is more "sportsmanlike" than simon pure worming I can not for the life of me see. By the same token, a spinner-fly may win bottom fish, but again I can not see why using such an arrangement is a whit more "honest" than a worm. Frankly, I do not much care for either of the above methods, unless back in behind the beyond and under the necessity of getting something to eat. I prefer to fish for sport when I sport fish.

Just the same, the patient and wise angler, knowing the way of the trout, can get some fish even on a backward opening day, using wet flies. I am often asked as to the difference between wet-fly and dry-fly fishing. Speaking realistically, the two terms describe the two methods. The wet fly is allowed to sink after the cast, the true dry-fly always floats upon the surface, which is facilitated by keeping the fly anointed with oil. Such fishing is not apt to prove overly remunerative before trout are taking on the surface, hence the early fishermen must needs turn to the wet-fly.

I think pattern is fully as determinative in wet-fishing as in dry. Speaking by and large, the flies used in wet fishing can well be a bit larger, in fact there is no great virtue in anything smaller than a No. 10 or 12. Indeed, there are times when some of those newer, scraggly patterns may be used to advantage; they appear, you know, under various trade names, and to mention them would be to advertise some particular firm and get myself into difficulties with other firms. Here the angler with a bit of fly-tying knowledge can spread himself, fashioning something never seen above the water or under the water, yet which will attract trout. Such flies should be so tied that they will cause quite a commotion on the water when cast, allowed to sink a bit before retrieving. Of the regulation flies, I am strong for showy ones, Royal Coachman, Silver Doctor, Perma-sheen Bell, Scarlet Ibis, and that ilk. The thing to remember is that in early spring, the fly-fisherman must fish. Keep the flies moving through the water, and let them sink deep down. It is surprising how much a man can accomplish by keeping after them, causing commotion in the water. Here is one time when he can "whip" the surface with rapid casts, then allowing the flies to settle for a moment or two before retrieving with many a tantalizing twist and jerk. And—he will earn every trout he takes!

State Distributes 21 Million Trees

Nurseries Will Soon Begin Shipment of Small Trees

Madison — Trees, 21,000,000 of them, will be distributed from the State Forest Nurseries for planting in Wisconsin this spring, surpassing by millions similar efforts undertaken in previous years.

C. L. Harrington, superintendent of forests and parks for the conservation department, has issued his spring tree distribution program and the first of the trees are now being shipped from the state nurseries. A total of 15,500,000 of the trees will come from the Wisconsin Rapids nursery, 2,500,000 will be supplied by the state nursery at Trout Lake, and 3,000,000 will come from Gordon.

The spring tree planting will represent an enormous total of man-hours of labor and will be only 4,000,000 trees short of both the spring and fall distribution of last year. The trees are small, averaging from 6 to 12 inches in height, but they are well adapted for forestry work and will be used primarily on county and state owned forest land. Most of the work will be done by boys from CCC camps, although many of the counties are handling their allotments through WPA crews or by direct county workers. It is expected a record effort in the reforestation of idle forest lands will be achieved in 1939.

The state reforestation program is centered largely on the reproduction of coniferous trees, the original type of forest cover for most of Wisconsin's area. Trees included in the spring shipments for planting include white, Norway, and jack pines, and white and Norway spruce.

In addition to the trees planted on state and county lands, many of those to be distributed are destined for living snow fences, shelterbelts and windbreaks, and roadside beautification work.

One and A Quarter Billions of Fish Planted in State Last Year

This article was prepared by the Wisconsin Conservation commission especially for the Appleton Post-Crescent)

In the year 1934, Wisconsin embarked upon an expanded fish propagation program which increased the production and distribution of game fish in the state from 320,903,585 in 1934 until the all-time high of 1,124,884,750 was reached in 1938. This expansion was most noticeable in such species as wall-eyed pike fry, muskellunge fry and fingerlings, large mouth black bass, and the various species of panfish.

Three fundamental principles are considered as the basis of a sound propagation and distribution plan. The first is to determine the correct species and the number and size of fish which should be planted in particular waters. Surveys are conducted by conservation wardens and biologists and their findings are considered in the development of a distribution program.

Second is the promise that artificial propagation must supplement natural reproduction. Civilization has made such excessive inroads on the fish resources of the state and nation that it is necessary that we cooperate to some extent in assisting Nature to restock the waters. It is only by this means that the supply will continue to meet the demands. In some of the thickly populated eastern states it is a very difficult task to keep abreast of the activities of fishermen, and some fish are caught almost as soon as they are planted.

Wisconsin's propagation program is conducted on a scientific basis and an attempt is made to stock as many of the waters as possible each year. As a result of the surveys before mentioned, a systematic plan of distribution is being mapped out to be sure that some waters are not overstocked while others suffer from lack of fish.

Forage Fish
The third principle is to stock certain waters with forage fish. Game fish as a rule require large amounts of such forage in order to grow to maturity, and in instances where waters are somewhat deficient in such food, the artificial introduction of forage fish enables them to mature more quickly. This in effect shortens the time required for fish to reproduce and increase the population in a given lake or stream.

We now have 34 hatcheries in the state and the newest one has a 448-jar capacity. The administration of such a large number of stations requires close supervision and in the spring of 1938, three of them were set up as area headquarters in a reorganization which has already proved its efficiency.

Hatcheries are located as close as possible to sources of obtaining eggs, with the trout stations in the southern part of the state and the lake fish hatcheries for the most part in northern Wisconsin. Location of hatcheries does not necessarily determine the waters in which fish are to be planted. Trucks equipped with oxygen tanks transport the fry or fingerling fish to the waters where they are planted with very little loss of life. All stocking is done the direct supervision of conservation department employees.

Plant Larger Fish
Through the expanded state program now in effect and the cooperation of those sportsmen's clubs which maintain rearing ponds,

Be Sure Your Rod Is Dry Before Storing It

If you open your aluminum fishing case, take out your rod and find that it is cracked, don't slam the blame immediately on the manufacturer.

Chances are, that the cracks are caused by your negligence in caring for the rod. The finest split bamboo rod will open at the seams if it is damp when stored away.

The explanation might be (should your rod be found cracked) that you put it in the bag wet before storing it in the case. The bag may have been left in the rain or may have drawn moisture from the bottom of the boat. It doesn't have to be soaked, just damp, in order to be damaged. Carry your rod in an aluminum case on trips, but remove it at home.

Over 6,000 acres of game refuges, covering a drift range of 25,000 acres, were removed from the refuge class this spring by the Delaware Game and Fish Commission. Refuges had been established for two years.

many thousands of young fish are being held to grow to larger size before planting.

Because a larger number of fish is being produced and held in hatcheries, there is an increase danger of disease being prevalent. For this reason, we established in 1937 a biology division in the department. The duties of the chief biologist and his assistants are many, but foremost among them are the prevention and cure of disease and a survey of our water to determine suitability for stocking fish and also to determine the success of former plantings.

Fish management activities are becoming common nowadays, and the program of fish refuges, lake and stream improvement, and transplanting and rescue work are taken for granted in the development of a successful program of fish production. Removal and control of the rough fish population has a very definite place in this picture also.

The spring spawning season is on right now, and while the cold weather has delayed it somewhat we do not anticipate that there will be any reduction in the number of eggs taken. We expect to make this a banner year for fish production in Wisconsin.

Pike Is Important Among Game Fish Of Badger Waters

Varieties of This Species Found in Many Parts Of Continent

The wall-eyed pike is a species of wide distribution. It is abundant in the inland lakes of Wisconsin and Minnesota and in Canada, and also throughout the Great Lakes region. In the Mississippi valley it occurs in many of the large streams and small lakes as far south as Alabama. Though found in many streams, it is presumably a lake fish and reaches its greatest abundance in the Great Lakes region. In different parts of its range it is known by different names. Among the Great Lakes it is called wall-eyed pike, yellow pike, dore' or dory by the French Canadians, and where the true pike is found, it is known as pickerel.

The young of a certain color are known as blue pike, which commercial fishermen believe to be a wholly different species from the yellow pike. It may be stated that no structural differences of note are known, and everything points to their being identical. A book name used by the United States fish commission is pike-perch, and a very appropriate name it is, showing at once its relationship with the perch family, and at the same time calling attention to its slender pike-like body.

The wall-eyed pike prefers clear water with gravel, rock, sand, or hard clay bottom and rarely is found in muddy streams or lakes. It is a voracious fish, feeding largely upon various minnows, but not to any great extent upon the young of whitefish or other important food fishes. They also feed freely upon crawfish during the season when in shallow water.

This fish ordinarily inhabits water of moderate depth, deeper than that frequented by the black bass. It varies greatly in size. Specimens weighing from 12 to 14 pounds are not uncommon in northern lakes of Wisconsin.

Spawns Early

The spawning time of wall-eyed pike is in the early spring and begins sometimes before the ice goes off. Many spawning fish average about two pounds in weight and produce as many as 90,000 eggs each. Larger fish produce proportionately greater numbers.

In hatcheries, its eggs are hatched in glass jars, and the fry are planted as soon as they are hatched. It is necessary to get them into their natural habitat, where food can be found, as they commence feeding very shortly after they are hatched. The eggs hatch in from six to 24 days, depending upon the temperature of the water, but about 12 days is the ideal time for pike to hatch.

This is one of the most important fishes propagated in the United States. Those who are acquainted with wall-eyed pike as a food fish hold it in very high esteem. The flesh is firm, flaky, and white, and of delicious flavor.

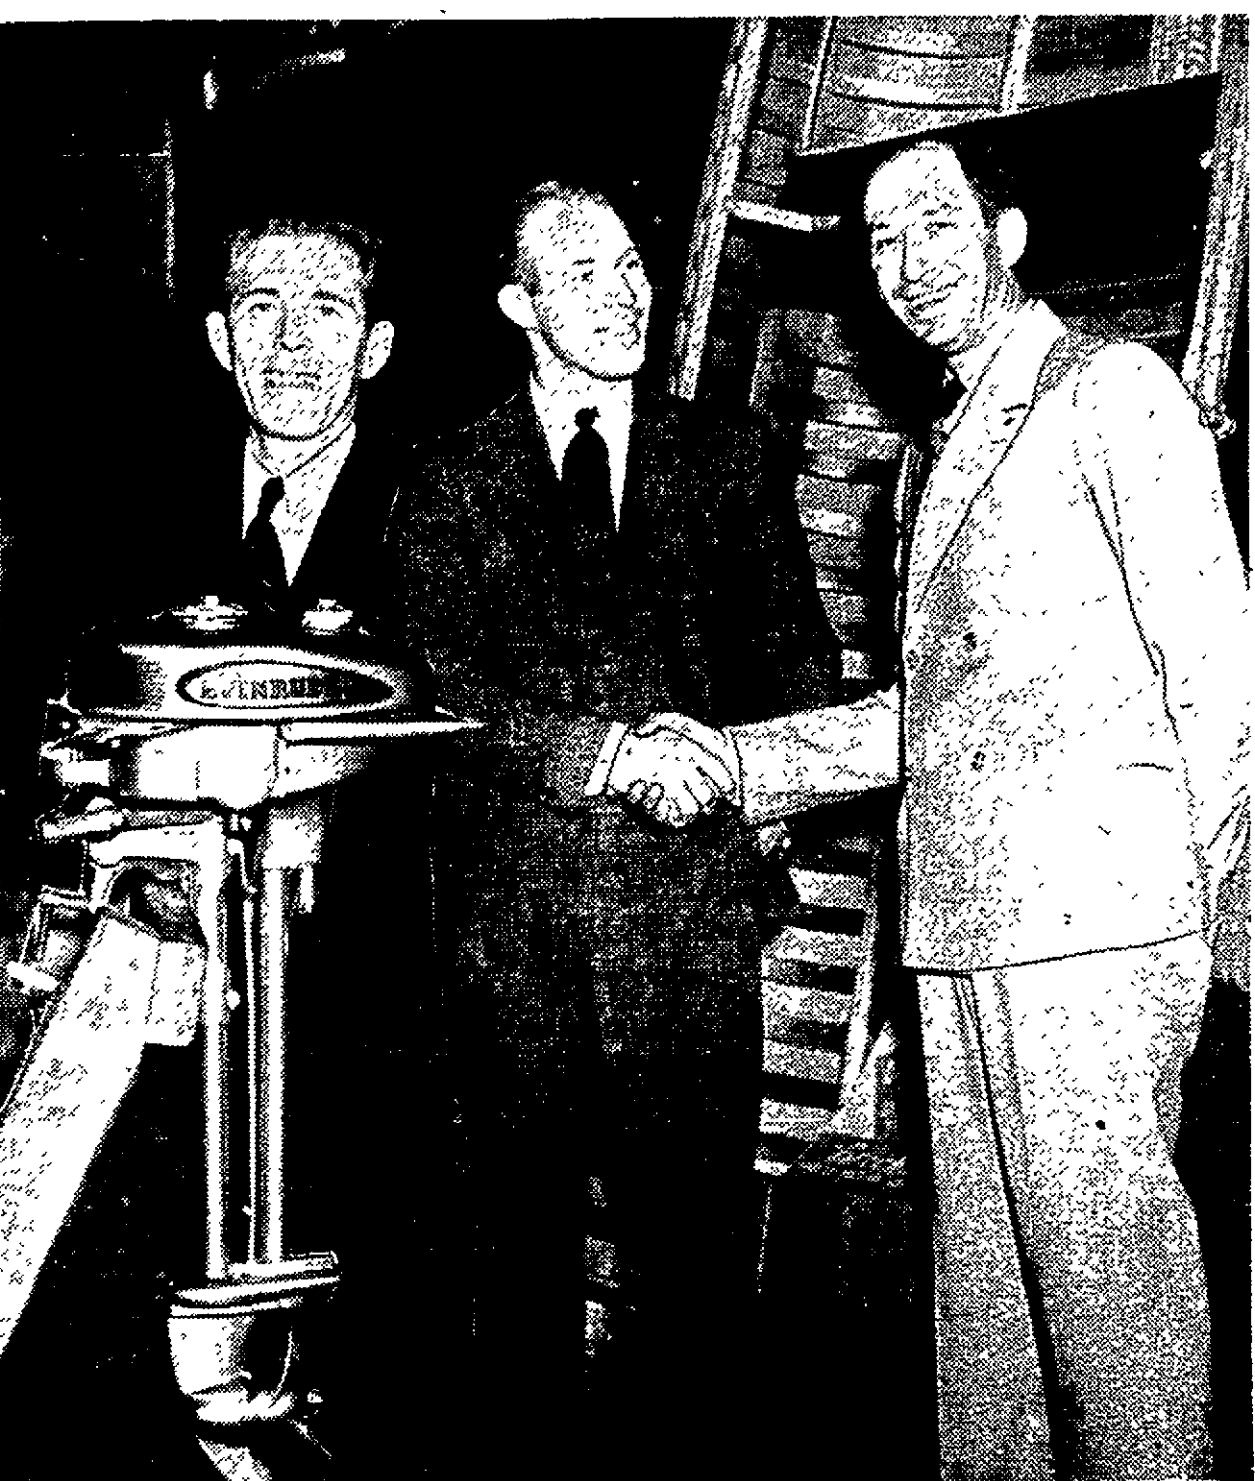

Description: Color dark olive, finely mottled with brass, the latter color forming indistinct, oblique bars; sides of head more or less vermiculated; lower jaw flesh-colored; belly and lower fins pinkish; spinous dorsal with large, jet-black blotch on membrane of the last two or three spines, otherwise nearly plain; second dorsal and caudal mottled, olive and yellowish; base of pectoral dusky, without distinct black blotch.

Woman's Purse Handy For Carrying Supplies

A handy pocket for carrying flies, leaders, sinkers and other odds and ends of fishing may be made from a woman's leather pocketbook. Those with zipper openings are preferable. Simply punch holes along the top of the pocketbook and wire it to the front of the reel, outside, where it will be easily reached. A good-looking pocketbook will add to the appearance of the reel.

Washing in Soapy Water Keeps Rod Grips Clean

Perspiration absorbed by cork rod grips will make them chip after a few season's use, in addition to staining them a dirty gray. Many fishermen sandpaper their red grips, but a better method is to wash them with lukewarm soapy water, scrubbing the cork lightly with a soft brush. After thorough drying the grip will be restored to its original freshness.

U. S. Government Regulates Use Of Boats if Motors are Attached

Fishermen starting out on a week-end expedition with all of their angling equipment, an outboard motor to be used on a rented rowboat, or even with their own rowboat, frequently believe that they have all the equipment necessary.

But they are sadly mistaken. For once an outboard motor is placed on a rowboat that vessel becomes a motor boat and if it is to be used on any navigable stream or lake it comes under the regulations of the United States government.

The full regulations for such boats are contained in a blue-covered pamphlet called "Pilot Rules for the Great Lakes and Their Connecting and Tributary Waters," issued by the Steamboat Inspection Service.

Divided In Three Classes Motor boats are divided into three classes, depending on their length. Class 1 includes boats less than 26 feet long; Class 2 includes boats from 26 to 40 feet in length, and Class 3 governs those from 40 to 55 feet long.

The following equipment is necessary for boats in Class 1:

From sunset to sunrise a Class 1 boat must carry a white light aft to show all around the horizon, and a combined lantern in the fore part of the vessel and lower part of the vessel and lower than the white light aft showing green to starboard and red to port.

A whistle or other sound producing mechanism capable of producing a blast of two seconds or more in duration.

Either life-preservers, life belts, buoyant cushions or ring buoys sufficient to sustain afloat every person on board and so placed as to be readily accessible.

Two copies of the pamphlet form of the pilot rules.

The requirements for boats in Classes 2 and 3 are progressively more exacting, and can be determined in the pilot rules pamphlet.

A fine not to exceed $100 is provided for any violation of the above rules. The motor boat shall be liable for the said penalty, and may be seized and proceeded against, by way of libel, in the district court of the United States for any district within which such vessel may be found.

Big Mouthed Bass Real Game Fish

The large-mouthed black bass is second only to its kin, the small-mouthed species, as a game fish. It is equally well known to anglers and its range is even greater. From Canada and the Red river of the North, it extends southward to Florida, Texas and even into Mexico. In all suitable waters it is everywhere abundant, but prefers lakes, bayous and other sluggish waters. It is most abundant in those moderate or shallow depths. Some small lakes that are rather shallow, whose bottoms are chiefly mud, and whose water is warm, are found to be well suited to the large-mouthed bass.

This fish has received many vernacular names, among which may be mentioned large-mouthed black bass, straw bass, green bass, bayou slough bass, lake bass, moss bass, grass bass, marsh bass, Oswego bass, trout, green trout, chub, and many others. The most distinctive and expressive name is doubtless large-mouthed black bass.

The relative merits of the two species as game fish have been much discussed. This depends upon many factors, as the character of the water with regard to extent, depth, temperature and the presence of vegetation. Our own experience leads us to believe that where the two species are found in the same water, the small-mouthed is superior in all those qualities which go together to make a game fish.

Both large and small-mouthed black bass are nest-building fish and protect their eggs until they are hatched, and care for their young until they are old enough to care for themselves. They spawn in the spring and their eggs hatch out in from six to 15 days depending upon the temperature of the water. They produce from three to 10,000 eggs, depending upon the size and age of the fish.

Description: Body ovate-fusiform; head large; mouth very wide; the maxillary in adult reaching beyond the eye. General color, dark green above, sides and below greenish silvery; three oblique dark stripes across cheek; some dark spots above and below lateral line.

Lots of Enjoyment in a Boat If It Is Properly Cared for

will be greater than the rest of the strip thus letting this raised seam actually seal the strips tight. Accordingly the care of this type of boat is a rather simple matter. If the boat is kept clean while in use, a brisk sanding and a coat of paint will put them in shape each season. Boats of this type are not dependent on skins of paint to keep them waterproof and should not be loaded with paint because all that is necessary is to "save the surface."

Canvas covered boats of which the canoe is a common example, are quite similar throughout the country. In other words there aren't so many variations in the actual construction though of course the differences do show up in workmanship and quality of materials.

This style has been adapted to many sizes of boats though by and large it is a more fragile type of construction and lends itself best to the more portable types. One of the biggest features of this construction is that it is made tight originally and is not intended to have any absorption of moisture. Of course because of their inherent lightness they cannot be handled as roughly as an all-wood boat. Experience shows however they can take a lot more punishment than many people think. Where a boat does not have constant use this type assures a "ready for duty" boat. They can be left in the water and will not soak up from the outside, or they can be left out in the sun and air and will not dry out. It is important to keep these boats clean, however, because should moisture and abrasive matter get between the canvas and the planking unnecessary wear occurs.

The annual coat of varnish on the inside offers no problem, but to keep your boat smooth finished and light on the outside is another matter. The safest solution on a canvas cover when preparing it for the season is only to varnish the outside if the color is satisfactory. If the original surface is bad or if a better color is wanted a good sanding down and possibly two light applications of paint with a coat of varnish to finish will do the trick.

Preparing the surface — In the whole matter of caring for a boat, the owner is most concerned about preparing the surface for finishing. Usually actual repairs are of a nature that the person will do those things he is capable of doing well and leaving the rest to the experienced repairman or mechanic. After two or three seasons of use, and especially where the boat has an accumulation of paint or where the surface is rough scarred, etc. the complete refinishing is usually desirable and the removal of the paint is the first task. Scraping is the usual way and is either done directly or with the aid of a blow torch or a paint and varnish remover. Sometimes the job can be accomplished by sanding.

In getting a smooth surface one might say that there is such a wide selection of fillers, seam compounds and sealers on the market that the proper use of certain of them is bound to assure a perfectly smooth surface on which to paint. Usually we find that all of them are accompanied by quantities of sandpaper and elbow grease. With regard to paint the only caution should be that marine paint should not be bought on price alone. Often times the cheaper ones turn out to be no more than "house paint" with the only thing marine about them being the label.

Here are a few suggestions for the care of your boat:

Keep your boat clean and free from leaves, mud, and articles which retain moisture.

The handling of anchors cause much damage. They're always harder than your boat and don't dent or break.

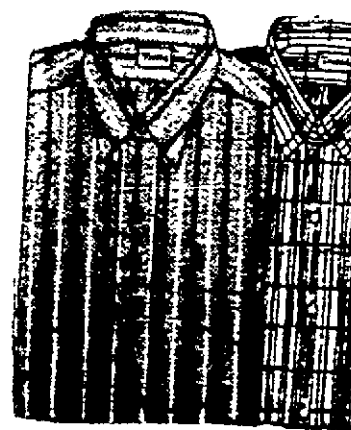

Watch the footwear of those who use your boat. Ladies heels have put many a hole in a canvas covered hull. Careless stepping about with nailed shoes or heavy outdoor shoes can do a lot of damage to a prized finish.

Watch your outboard motor. See that the lug flanges on the motor bracket are o. k. Also do not permit accumulations of oil and grease on the side of the boat. Not only is the removal a tedious task but oftentimes a satisfactory surface on which to refinish is not to be had.

Know the strength of your boat and do not expect too much of it. If you bought it because it was light and easy to handle you must expect to sacrifice certain features. Be careful about stepping on the seats and decks. The fact that they seem to hold does not mean they are not causing an unnecessary strain at some point.

Be careful about the landing and mooring of your boat. There are lots of ways to tie up a boat; don't be satisfied with just "good enough."

People often wonder whether or not they should keep their boats

THIS BOAT IS ONE OF MAJOR PRIZES AT FISHERMEN'S PARTY

in or out of the water. This is quite dependent on the boat. If it is well built and properly finished it can be kept out of the water when not in use and will not dry out to cause bad leaking. Here again there are many many circumstances which complicate the matter of making a recommendation without knowing all the conditions involved. For example, the fellow who carefully covered his boat with a big paper mill felt did not know that the heat of the sun caused the heavy cover to sweat and thus made conditions of warmth and moisture which are ideal for rotting.

It wasn't so long ago that the lucky fellow who had a boat usually also had a cottage at which he kept it. Not so now, for boating interest has grown so much that many people find themselves carrying boats along the highway for the sole purpose of "getting off the highways" just as soon as they reach their chosen destination. When you have first class equipment there is no danger in towing a trailer or carrying a boat on top of the car. There are many fine boats in various constructions and sizes that can be carried around and the choice can be made by judging the number of people you usually will want to accommodate and how much of a lift you will have. Good safe trailers can be made at a nominal cost and when provided with proper bunks or cradle and fastenings, the wear and tear on the boat isn't worth considering. Then too for the many lightweight boats there are a couple of very good vacuum grip car-top carriers that are well nigh fool proof when used on the mo-

Good Fishing in Fox River Called Future Prospect

Sewage Clean-Up Is Restoring Good Conditions for Fish Life

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison — Although the march of civilization makes it impossible for the stream ever to revert to the virgin conditions found three centuries ago by French military explorers and missionaries, the Fox River will again furnish good fishing for the populous area which it serves.

That is the prediction of L. F. Warrick, chief of the state board of health's bureau of sanitary engineering, who has supervised sewage control work in the Fox River Valley for the last decade, and is satisfied that great strides have been made in cleaning up the historic stream.

Warrick points out that the Fox River already contains almost all species of Wisconsin game fish, but that the principal problem to insure continued fish growth in the river is to eliminate the critical periods—periods of low water and high temperatures—when the pollution in the stream becomes dangerous.

Warrick pointed out, however, that a cooperative program by Fox River valley municipalities, the state board of health, and Valley Industries has already shown substantial results.

Much Improved
"The stream is decidedly improved over the condition it was in five years ago", he commented, pointing out that with the exception of Kimberly and Combined Locks, every community on the lower Fox has erected a municipal sewage disposal plant. (Construction on a joint plant for Kimberly and Combined Locks recently started).

"Industrial waste problems are also being solved gradually", he continued, "although it requires a lot of internal changes and expenditures for the plants involved". "We are driving at reducing the river pollution below the amount that can be safely taken care of during the critical periods of low flow in summer", he explained.

Industries are either building their own disposal plants, or are being connected with the municipal systems, he said.

So confident is Warrick that the river is now safe for fish life that he has advocated experimentation with live boxes by the state conservation department this year to determine whether planted fish can get through the critical periods.

He pointed to the area around Appleton on the Fox as particularly favorable now.

"I believe that the way the Appleton fishing areas have come back—sportsmen have reported much better catches—that we may hope that the whole stream may

IT WON'T BE LONG NOW BEFORE THEY'LL START BITING
A few more days and this scene will be re-enacted in hundreds of shady spots all over Wisconsin. Fishing is one of the few sports that everyone—young and old, strong and feeble, boys and girls—can actively participate in, and there was no greater enjoyment in boyhood than the living of the scene pictured here.

Doesn't Cost Much Money to Be Well Equipped for Fishing

BY ARTHUR H. BENSON

Go where you wish, talk to old and young fishermen and before they really get "warmed up" you began to hear about the bait that caught the big ones or if the line had not snapped that the biggest fish of the season would have been landed. "If I only had had a 'Blue Whiz' bait" or a different rod," "another one says and many a trip has been somewhat of a disappointment because the fisherman was not prepared with correct equipment.

Let's assume we are a group of average fishermen and that we are going after pike, pickerel, bass, etc. First of all we should select the right type of rod. It can be of steel or bamboo—the type of material is not so essential providing it has "backbone" enough to set the hooks and a balance and flexibility so that casting will continue to be a delight. One piece solid steel rods of 4 1/2 or 5 foot size with offset reel seat are most popular today. The price ranges upward from $2.95 with favorite ones at $3.95 to $6.95. A tip to any fisherman should be "buy as good a reel as you can"—the better the reel, the smoother the action and greater freedom from trouble. The cost may run from $3.95 to $13.95 for the better makes. Bill or Jim may want a twenty five or thirty pound test line but I'll take an eighteen or twenty for mine, because of the ease of casting. When a twelve pound test line will land a man why buy a clothesline for a fish? When weeds or snags prevail, many skilled muskie fishermen will use a heavier line. A good line should be made of hard braided silk and waterproofed to make it impervious to water. The tendency among manufacturers is to make lines finer and yet retain strength.

Varieties of Baits
The baits? That depends a great deal upon you and the fish you are after. Any time you talk baits in a group, you are apt to get into an argument. But every kit, whether it's for the beginner or a skilled artisan, should include at least two sizes of spoon hooks, spinners of the popular June Bug type for both pork rind and minnow bait, at least two or three surface baits which are great fish getters for pickerel, bass, northern pike, muskies, etc., two or more deep traveling baits with their tantalizing action such as the famous Pike Minnow, Heddon River Runt and others, several sizes of casting spoons, a bottle of pork chunk or rind, a varied number of assorted hooks for worms or live bait and last but not least, a gaff hook to land them and a stringer to string them on. Each kit will soon include many "pet" baits that have caught fine messes of fish ... but let's leave that to the fishermen who swear by them.

A good leader from six to twelve inches long and made of bronze cable wires is a prime necessity to avoid the cutting of line by the fish when he strikes. Because of its lightness and thus less interference with "bait action" the six inch size is preferred by most fishermen.

By all means select a tackle box that is big enough for your needs. They're not expensive and too frequently are purchased too small. Today they may be had in regular models with cantilever trays or in copper with cork lining to make them float and stay dry. A good box has compartments for reel, line, baits, fish knife, scaler, sinkers, hooks, etc.

Adding frequently to the kit of a new bait or some "fishing gadgets" increases the pleasure of any trip and if you want a sport that packs thrill after thrill, GO FISHING AS OFTEN AS YOU CAN.

Choice of Fly Rod Line Is Important

Tapered Lines Do Not Work Well With Certain Kinds of Lures

The proper selection of a line for casting a fly or a bug with a fly rod is important and should be made with a particular rod in mind. In order to successfully cast with a fly rod, a line which is heavy enough to balance the action of the rod is necessary.

A level line (one whose size or diameter is the same throughout its length) can be very satisfactory, if the proper size to balance the rod is selected. More level lines than double taper lines (those consisting of a length of level line tapered down to a smaller size at each end) are sold yet for certain types of fishing double tapers do have advantages.

Since a more or less large diameter line is necessary to properly balance a rod, and it is obvious that a lighter line would fall on the water more gently, the two often are connected with a gradual taper to combine the natural advantages of both. The length of the small tip and the taper are important in their effect on the action of the line.

With a very long slow taper like on English lines, it is difficult to make short casts because that heavy portion of the line that is necessary to balance the rod is not out in the air where it can do some good but is actually being carried on the rod and reel during the cast. The taper also affects the way the line turns in the air. Lines can be purchased that are tapered only on one end and can be used as a tapered line or as a level line.

Many small bugs can be successfully thrown with double tapers but there are many fuzzy or large light bugs that offer a lot of resistance in the air and which do not cast well with a standard double taper. These lures can be easily cast, however if a short section of a large size line is used to carry, ahead and pull the line through the air. This idea is made practical in a well-designed torpedo head line by using a very short front taper and a relatively large belly to get the proper weight to pull the lure and to balance the rod. This belly is then tapered down to a medium size running line which is easy to shoot.

Legislature Has Host of Bills to Regulate Fishing

Little Action Taken Thus Far on Conservation Measures

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison — Literally scores of bills affecting the interests of Wisconsin sportsmen have been introduced by senators and assemblymen in the state legislature. Because of the press of administration measures, and the deluge of bills on all manner of subjects, little progress has yet been made on conservation matters by the lawmakers, however.

Two dozen or more of the stack of conservation measures affect the interests, and the fights, of fishermen directly.

The more important of these measures are listed below, with their numbers, and their authors, so that fishermen may communicate with the sponsors of the bills, or their own legislative representatives, if they desire to express themselves.

657 A—By committee on agriculture: to prohibit the sale of rosfish under the name of sea perch.

225 A—By John L. Youngs, (R), Oconto: to provide a bag limit of 25 suckers taken by dip nets in streams up to ten miles inland from Green Bay and Lake Michigan.

563 A—By committee on conservation: To require applicants for hunting or fishing license to identify himself. Other provisions to amend and clarify hunting and fishing license laws.

536A — By R. W. Peterson (R), Berlin: to provide that only the owner or his farm tenant and members of their immediate families may hunt or fish on any of their posted lands.

Wisconsin Lakes Are Fish Capital

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison — In the streams and lakes of Wisconsin live all the inland game fishes of any consequence found anywhere in America, and Wisconsin lies in the center of what is the best natural fishing territory in the United States, according to a research paper recently completed by Edward N. Hein of the publicity division of the state conservation department.

"The nation's fishing is centered in northeastern United States", Hein points out, "but the east with its enormous population has trouble enough maintaining its fishing for its own population, and while we do have a heavy fishing load now, the Great Lakes area can look forward to an ever-increasing army of fishermen. That is why we lay claim to being the fishing capital of the country", says Hein.

"To get down to specific fishes", continues Hein, "we might start with the pike family and talk about specimens found in northeastern United States.

"The muskellunge belongs to this family and any national reference book will tell you that it is found "in the deeper waters of the Great Lakes region", and that it is the most courageous and powerful fishing grounds in various parts of Wisconsin.

77S — By Allan J. Busby, (P), West Allis: to reduce the minimum fine for violation of fishing and hunting laws from $50 to $1.

19S—By Erle Ingram, (P), Eau Claire: To require fishing licenses of all residents between the ages of 18 and 70 for both rod and reel and hook and line fishing.

Fishing Usually Is Good in Early Months of Spring

You May Have to Use Live Bait, but You Can Catch 'Em if You Try

BY HAROLD C. HOLLIS

We anglers are usually compensated for the tedium of the long winter by the excellent fishing that we enjoy at the beginning of the season. No matter what fish we are after, he is nearly always ready to hit on opening day.

May 15 sees the opening of the trout season and it is this month that we get some of our best fishing, even though we may have to use live bait.

In the early season streams are generally high and discolored. Fish are generally feeding near the bottom since most of their food consists of insect larvae dislodged by the water. Sometimes, however, when the weather is favorable there may be some insects flitting about and the fish will take these. Last year on the second day of the season I took several trout on wet flies.

Should Fish Slowly

If the streams are high the trout will be scattered and will be found in places where they would not be in mid-summer. It is, therefore, advisable to fish slowly and overlook no water that could possibly harbor a trout.

Anglers who fish the Brule and other rivers that flow into Lake Superior enjoy a unique kind of early fishing. It is at this time that the large rainbows which spend most of their time in the lake are in the rivers. Live bait, streamer flies and spinners are the favorite lures and each year many fish above five pounds and nearly always a few in the 10-pound class are taken.

The early season, from the time the ice goes out until about mid-June, is one of the two periods of the year when the fly rod fisherman gets a chance at the lake trout. At this time and in the late fall the surface water is cold enough for the laker and he is found in the shallows. Taken with a fly rod or a casting rod the laker is one of the best of fresh water fighters. The principal lake trout regions are northern Minnesota, Ontario and Lake Superior, a recent field of operations which has produced some noteworthy fish.

Muskie Season Open

The season for wall-eye and northern pike opens in May. The early season is doubtless the best time for both of these fishes and they can be taken at almost any hour of the day. Wisconsin is the only one of the important muskellunge states in which the tiger can be legally taken in May. Most other states and the Ontario provinces have a July 1 opening. Guides say that the May muskie fishing is the best of the entire season.

The season on black bass does not open until late June or July due to the fact that this fish spawns later than the others. If you catch a bass during May or early June, and it is quite likely that you will while casting for pike, be sure to let him go. The reason he hit your lure so readily is that he was protecting his spawning bed. Were he removed the spawn or the small fishes would be at the mercy of marauding pike and perch. It is only good sportsmanship and good conservation sense to avoid the bass spawning places so far as possible and to release all fish accidentally taken.

HOUSE-MOVING THIEVES

Amarillo, Texas — (P) — Homer Wheeler, real estate man, reported to police a house in his care was missing. The police searched all day without results. The next morning the house was back on its foundation.

FISHERMEN ANXIOUSLY AWAIT OPENING OF TROUT SEASON

It's a bit chilly wading into a stream right now, but in another two weeks the weather will have warmed a bit (we hope) and the fun of hooking the big fellows won't be tempered quite so much by chilly legs. May 15 is the opening of the trout season in most of Wisconsin and scenes like this one will be enacted in thousands of places.

POCAHONTAS

BLACKER THE FISH — BETTER THE DAY FOR FISHING

On the above Fisherman's Calendar the best days for fishing are indicated by a solid black fish, days not so good by a partially black fish, and poor days for fishing by a white fish. This calendar is scientifically compiled, using the moon, the signs, and every known factor that has a bearing on fishing as used by the "Old Timer," as well as the modern Sportsman. Use discretion in selecting your fishing days—do not go when it is too windy, tides against you, or the waters muddy—but select comparatively calm days when the fish shows solid black and you will find this calendar to be surprisingly accurate for both inland and deep sea fishing, and for any waters in or surrounding the United States and Canada.

Roosevelt On Reorganization Receives

Some Congress Members Object to Specific Changes APPROVAL SEEN

Barkley Predicts Overwhelming Approval For Program

Washington—President Roosevelt's first proposals for government reorganization met widespread approval in congress today, although a few members objected to specific changes.

Representative Taber (R-N. Y.) took the first step toward blocking the reorganization plan.

The New Yorker, ranking Republican member of the house reorganization committee, offered a resolution of disapproval of the chief executive's plan.

The Taber resolution was a short paragraph stating merely that congress disapproves the presidential reorganization plan No. 1 submitted yesterday.

Senator King (D-Utah) said if he found the plan would not promote economy and efficiency, he would offer a resolution to reject it. Some house Republicans took a similar attitude.

Even the critics, however, saw little possibility congress would veto the program, which would combine into three huge agencies the public works, social security, and lending functions of the government. The consolidations will become effective in 60 days unless both senate and house disapprove.

Democratic Leader Barkley of the senate predicted an overwhelming acceptance, and Republican Leader McNary said that "if the plan spells economy and simplification in government, it will be warmly embraced by the congress."

Roosevelt Estimates
Mr. Roosevelt placed the economies at $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 a year out of the $235,000,000 which the various units involved now spend. This will result, he told reporters yesterday, from such things as eventual personnel reductions, smaller rental costs, and restricted material needs.

Two more reorganization plans, the president told reporters, were yet to be submitted. These will deal with shifting bureaus from one department to another and with reorganizing the machinery with individual departments. One will be perfected in about a week and the other shortly afterward.

The intra-departmental reorganization, Mr. Roosevelt said, will include a merger of the six investigative agencies of the treasury, among them the famed secret service.

The three new agencies proposed yesterday will correspond, it was believed in government circles, to major departments, although their chiefs will not have cabinet status and will get $12,000 a year compared with the $15,000 paid cabinet officers. Each of the new administrators will have a $9,000-a-year assistant.

No Early Appointments
Mr. Roosevelt said he had given no thought to appointments to these positions and it was believed none would be made until expiration of the 60-day period for congressional approval.

It was authoritatively reported, however, that Chairman Jesse Jones of the RFC was most likely to become chief of the lending agency. There was speculation Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the social security board, might head the new security agency.

There were unofficial estimates that about 90,000 federal employees would be shifted under the program. Any with civil service status whose jobs are ended will have first call for vacancies.

Units to go into the new federal security agency are the social security board, United States Employment Service, office of education, public health service, national youth administration, and CCC.

The works agency will consist of the PWA, the WPA, the bureau of public roads, the public building branch of the treasury's procurement division, a part of the building management branch of the national park service, and the United States Housing Authority.
